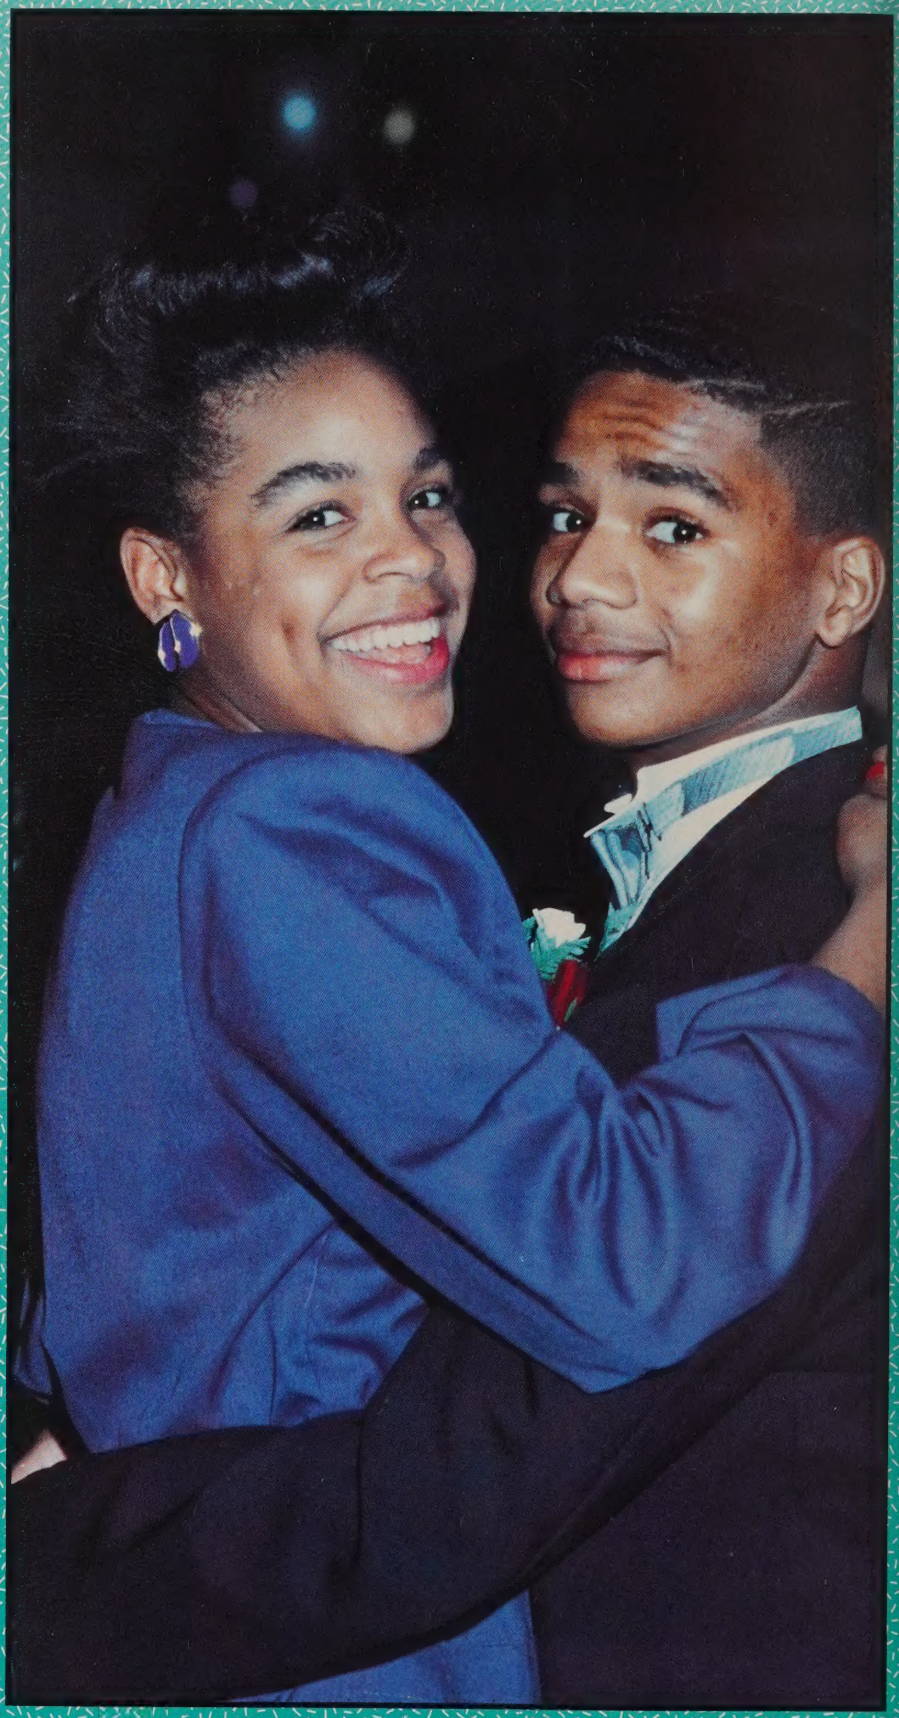
50th Year Anniversary Edition

Gold Rush

As 1989 hit the scene Mt. Vernon High School had seen 50 years go by. Each year brought about changes in almost every aspect—school, students, and teachers.

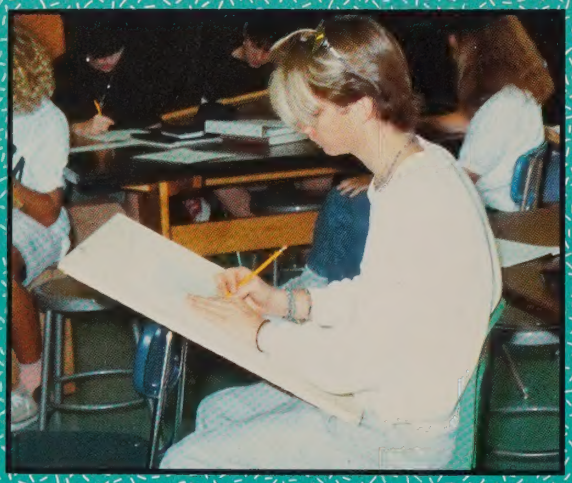
Over the years, school has become a higher priority in one's life, whether it's academically or socially. Students are more inclined to work harder and to get more involved with extra-curricular activities in order to prepare for life after high school. Obviously, the changes in attitude of the students have brought about great changes in the school itself.

Gradually the school has become molded to the wants and needs of the students. Clubs and activities have been added to the school's program for interested students. School is no longer a dreaded place of boredom mixed with homework, but a place to come and grow.



Happy to be there, Angie Robinson and Kondwani Wigglesworth enjoy the last dance at Homecoming.

To perfect his artistic skills, Dan Bush works his fingers to the bone.



Letting herself be heard, Beverly Bogarty voices her opinion.

English teacher Miss Donelle Oxley explains a literary point.

Hard work produces a fine float for the class of '90.

Bring It Together

A wide variety of students formed this year's student body. Over the past 50 years, the student body has evolved from cultural homogeny to a diversity almost as extensive as that of the United Nations. Despite some cultural differences, students came together to form a cohesive unit.

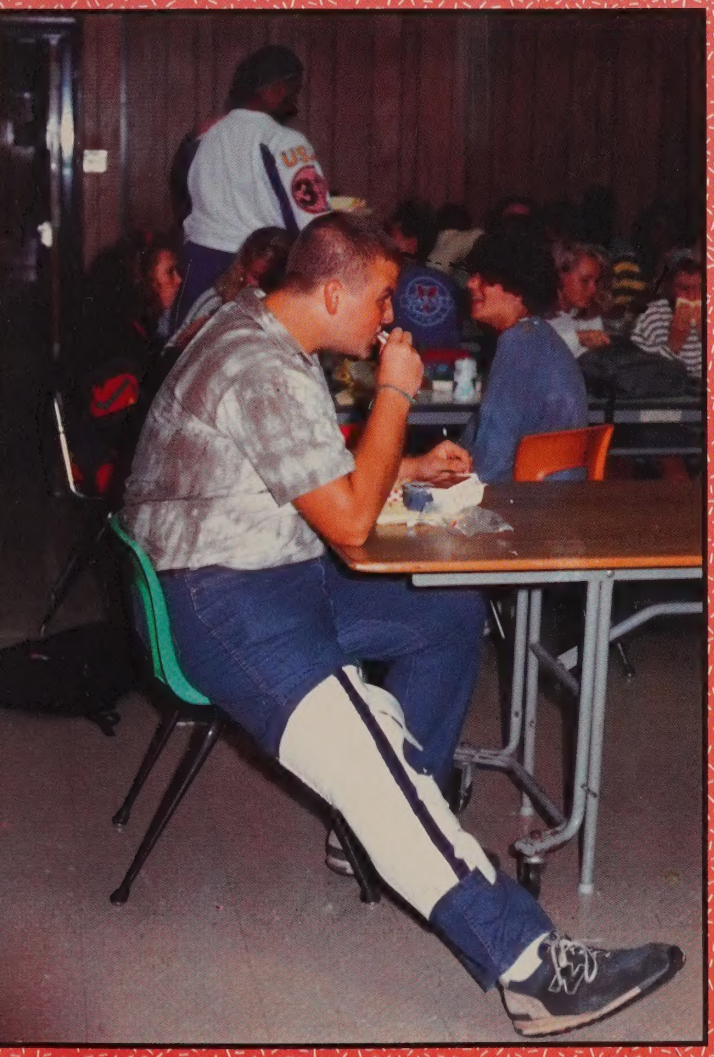
With students of all races representing a wide variety of foreign countries, the school's heterogeneous quality became one of its greatest strengths; students were exposed to a variety of philosophies, ideas, and languages. Encountering variety prepared teenagers for the real world that they will encounter when they enter the work force.

By learning from all these different ethnic backgrounds, the faculty, staff, and students became a cooperative, unified, global family able to achieve whatever it set out to accomplish. This truly was the year we struck gold.

While in Government class, Senior Laura Pross demonstrates her opinions openly through facial expressions.

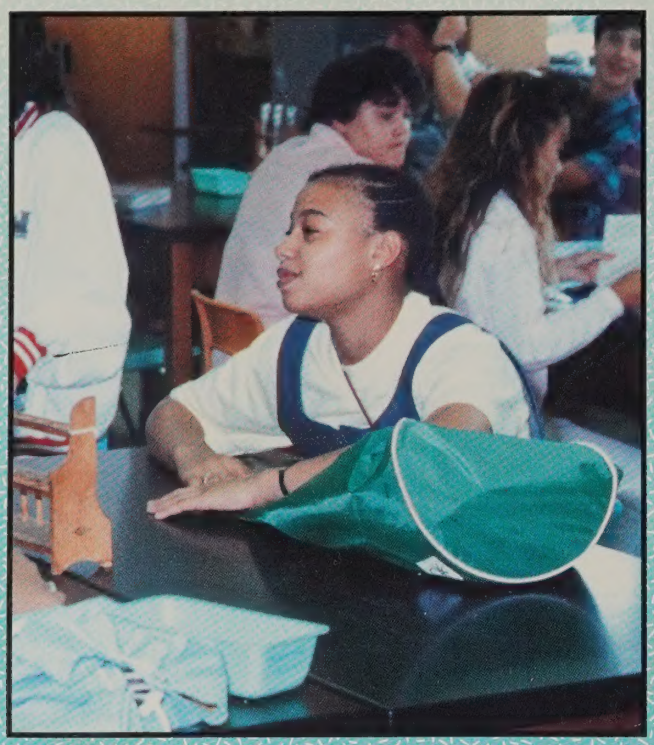
Conducting discussion, Vince Owusu tells friends about Friday's play.

While rushing to his next class, Tim Weis takes a break to smile.



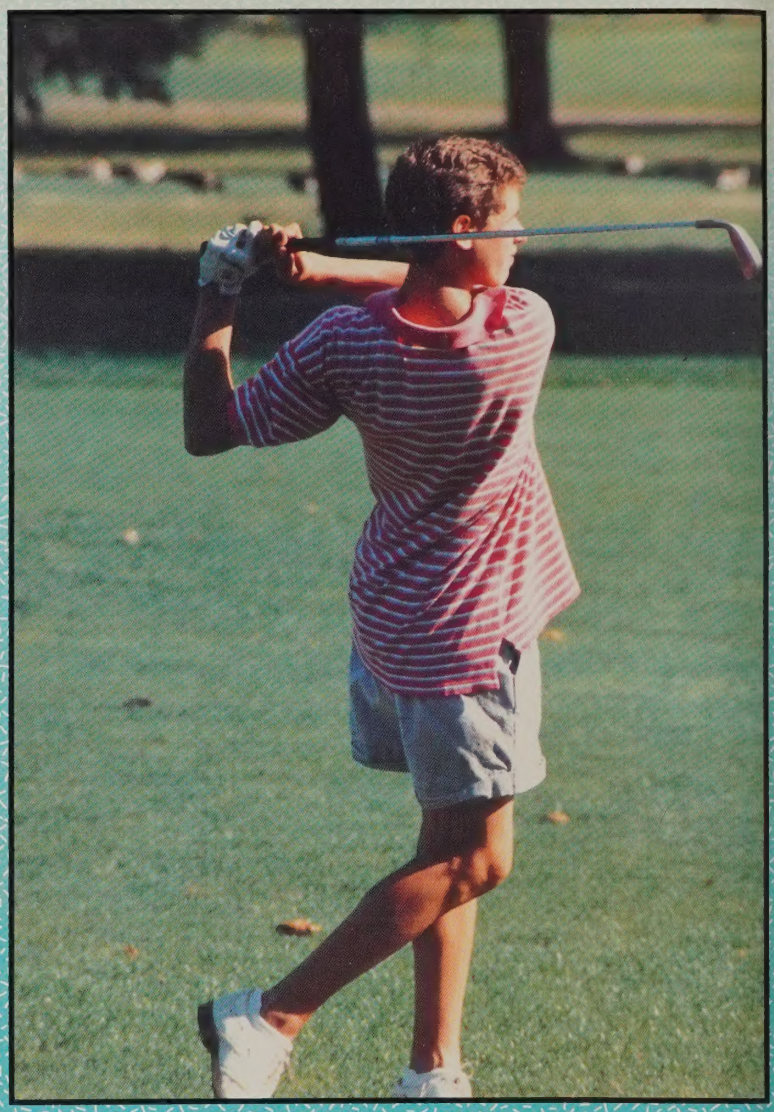
Starting a new year, Tom Nassif becomes familiar with the school.

Ignoring his handicap, Roy Devine casually eats lunch.



Sophomore Kim Essex and friends strive for academic excellence.

Involved in a tradition that most students do not wish to participate in, Tim Scruggs makes the best of his situation.



Continuing with sports, Jeff Martino perfects his stroke and aim.

A group of animated students enjoys lunch in the Senior courtyard.

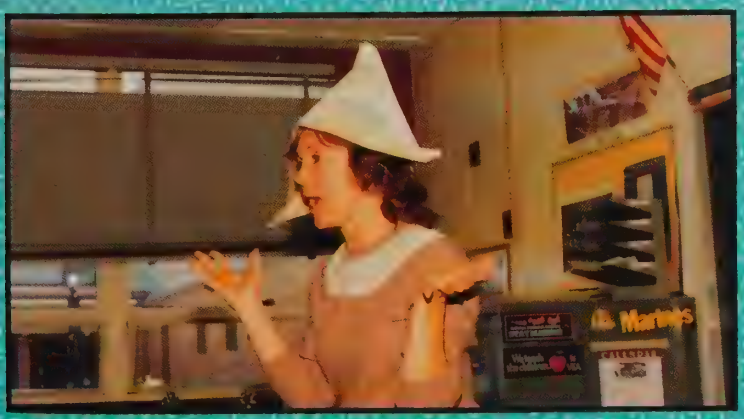
Keeping Spirit Alive

The spirit of Mount Vernon has continually been focused around many of our traditions. Through this year of the 50th anniversary, we have seen many opportunities to come together as classes and as a whole to celebrate our traditions. The spirit always explodes during the Homecoming week with floats, skits, and wall-hangings. These customs have been a part of the student life as far back as the thirties. About every two months, or at the kick-off of a new sports season, we all come together in a friendly class competition to challenge each other with the class call. To win the "pep-jug" has always been a milestone for every class.

Since the first Mount Vernon sports event took place, sports have always played an extensive role in our extracurricular lives whether it be football or field hockey, track or basketball. These activities helped engender the charisma of all M.V. students.

Throughout the golden years, Mount Vernon has always been a strong school, academically speaking. With a faculty of many brilliant teachers and an active student body we continued the tradtion of academic excellence.

After fifty years, many traditions have become an integral part of school life. This year spirited students encouraged the sports teams and academic teams to hold their heads high in competition.



Pep rallies bring all kinds of people together.

Explaining the intricacies of foreign policies is no problem for government teacher, Mrs. Betsy Calhoon.

Freshmen Susan Minson and Jennifer Hansen find relief in their locker fantasy men.

Sophomore Michael Wells gets caught up in the hustle and bustle of the Mount Vernon school bus system.

Too caught up in socializing, Shane Stafford's mind momentarily wanders away from football.

Happy just being together, Sheridan Vail, Doug Cowan, Art Behnke, Kim Beach, Chae Kim, and Aaron Ludwig set out to make 1989 quite a memorable year.

Student Life

The social scene at Mount Vernon was a hectic one; students were kept busy with activities inside and outside of the school. Through these activities we all made our own friends and perhaps even got to know ourselves a little better. School related events, such as football games, plays, and prom put a little variety on students' social calendars, while outside of school we were kept busy with parties and other private social gatherings, whether it was at a friends house, in DC, or at the beach.

These times, the times we shared with those special friends, were when the memories were made. This is the angle of our high school years which we will look back on with fond rememberance, the angle that left us with a special feeling for the years we attended Mount Vernon High School. These were the years that we really struck gold.

Intrigued by the ongoings of the football game, Angie Gulino, Bonnie Williamson, and Jill Johnson show their undying support of the Mount Vernon Majors.

TRADITIONAL BEAUTY

Homecoming "88", a truly memorable moment in Mount Vernon's history. This night it would crown it's fiftieth Queen. Mount Vernon has had a long history of choosing young ladies of charm and elegance. This year's decision for queen was no exception.

The crowd waited silently with anticipation. Then it was announced. This year's Queen was to be Noele Valley. This must have been a difficult decision because the entire court had a beauty rarily seen in one place at one time.

The choice for king also was well deserved, Michael Bowers was crowned. Michael was in the locker room getting ready for the second half but I'm sure he must have been as happy as his family and friends were. The courts were placed in their motorized chariots and driven around so the last five generations could see the kind of people that Mt. Vernon possesses. Although homecoming has come and gone, this will be something many people will remember for the rest of their lives.

As sophomore prince, Chad Marsh beams at the crowd.

Mr. Carlson proudly presents his daughter Sarah Carlson as one of 1988's senior princesses.

Kondwani Wiggiesworth expresses his prince status in his tux.

The freshmen class has Jane Hamrick and Sarah Gaskin for their elegant court.

Sophomores, Julie Mullen and Aisha Johnson give a pleasing smile to the crowd.

Laid back about the whole Homecoming rush Angie Gulino and Angie Robinson represent the juniors.

As. Dr. Paula Johnson places the crown on her head, Noelle Valley, the new homecoming queen, radiates grace.

Last but not least for the senior court, members Shawnee Bruns and Dana Hensley look exquisite as always.

Grinning from ear to ear; Andrea Barnwell enjoys being a part of the homecoming scene.

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES

Celebrating 50 years as a school, the homecoming theme was "The Signs of Times." It showed the eras that made up the great tradition of Mount Vernon. Each class showed its spirit by working long hard hours on their floats.

The phantamagoria of the floats provoked both sides of the stands to show their spirit. The seniors doing the 70's outdid everyone with their outstanding float of the discos. The juniors came in second place with their recreation of a 50's diner. The sophomores and freshmen also showed their spirit, with the sophomores doing the 40's. They did a good job recreating Gepeto's workshop. The freshman, with the 60's, did a fantastic job on the space age.

The professional quality of all the floats gave the crowd a spectacular show and will give future classes a goal to shoot for during the Homecoming week.

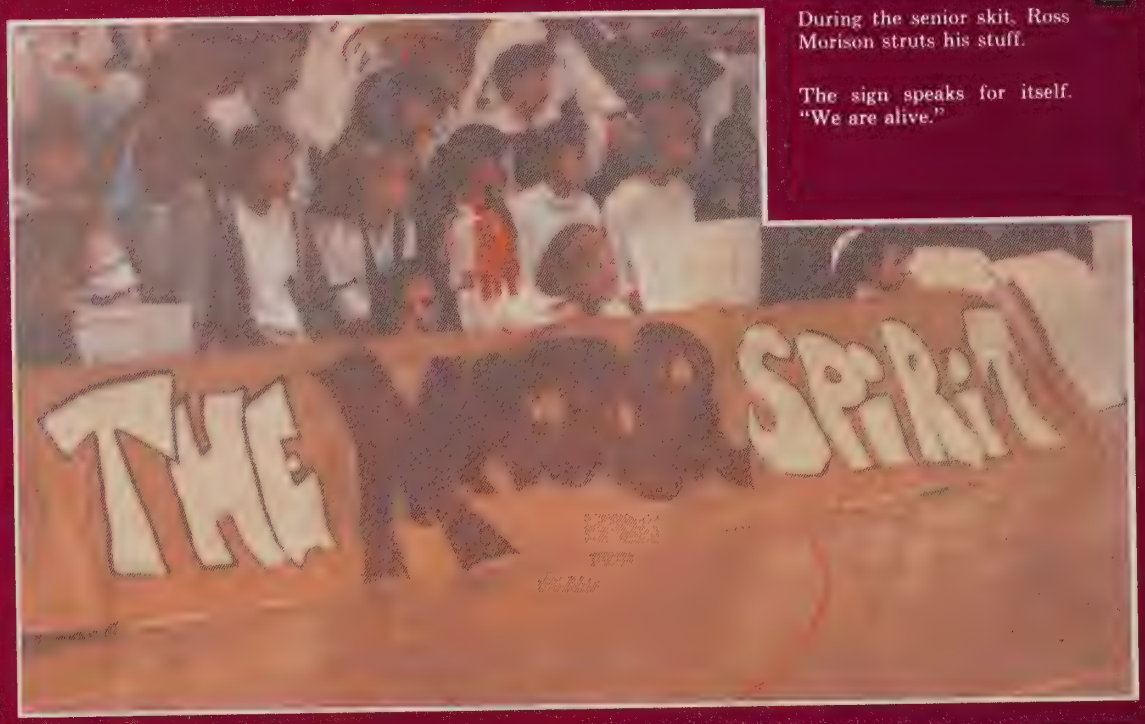
EXCLUSIVE DECADES

Who won the homecoming act? It was the class of '90, caving in the the charts. They left no choice but to sacrifice their time to win. Three out of five could not be beat.

The inside story came in next. Every class of M.V. dedicated their time and effort to make their 50th anniversary last in memory. Scenes from the past made many hearts cry out with joy.

The halls of M.V. high have been left with the final assurance.

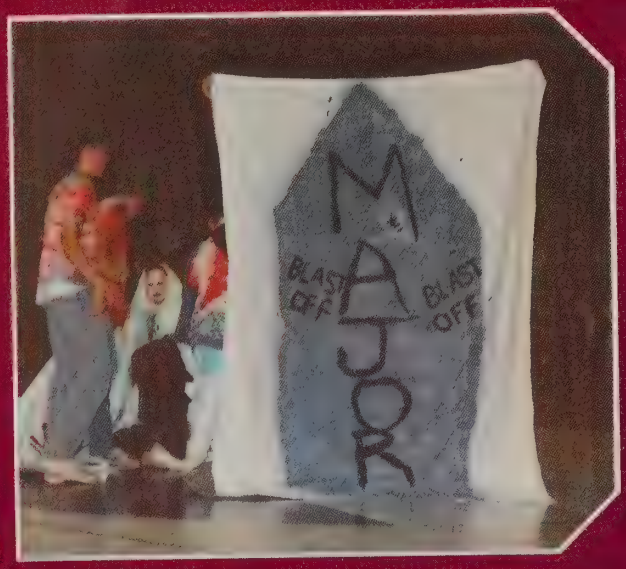
During the senior skit, Ross Morison struts his stuff.



The sign speaks for itself. "We are alive."

"The king" visits the M.V. diner....

The "take-off" begins with the class of '92.



The late night drag race between Andy Obermyer and Kevin Newman begins.

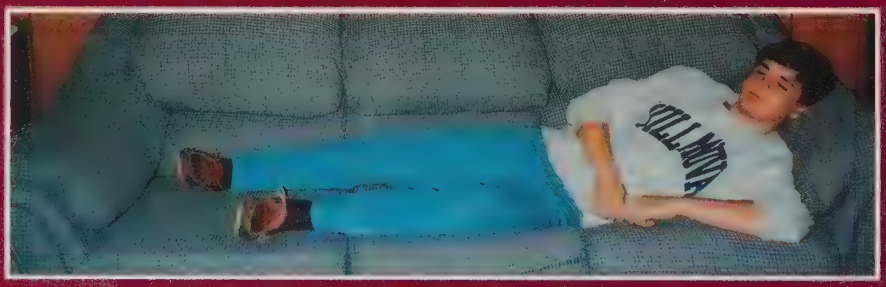
Plans are made in Gepetto's workshop.

The enthusiasum and class spirit of Mr. Gary Jones, one of their sub-school counselors, helped the Junior class be so successful.

The class of '92 launched off with the A-Lee-ns, who took the Major's quarterback. The Majors blew down the aircraft and won their battle. Pinochio's major quest was to find five major players to beat the Lee Woodburners in a tug of war. This was revenge for Pinochio's getting jumped in the woods.

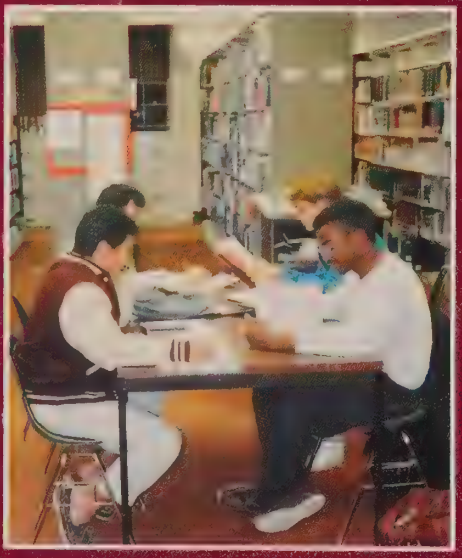
Finally, Greg Major, a part of the senior skit was being bullied by a Lee Lancer. So Greg proved by a major disco that he was stronger than the Lee Lancer himself.

Mount Vernon's rocking Seniors go all out on Friday night.



After a long weekend of partying, Norm Marzetti takes a short snooze.

Junior, Wendy Chessure calls up a friend looking for something to do over the weekend.



Working on next month's homework are Scott Price, Jeff Nichols, Tae Kim and Thi Do.

With a big bear hug, David Askin, Andy Fielding and Stefanie Starkey show the strong friendship of their senior year.

PARTIES, STUDIES, JOBS, G'TOWN

WEEKENDS-the anticipation of them seemed to be the only driving force that dragged students through the long thirty-six weeks of school. Without them, no one could have survived the "high school experience." When the bell rang at MVHS at 2:05 on Friday afternoon, hair was let down, tensions were let loose, and the good-times rolled.

Good-times on the weekends were defined and achieved in a number of different ways. Many of the students contacted the well known partiers in the hope of finding out where the weekend's social gatherings would be held.

Some of the MVHS students had part time jobs thus having to spend their weekends earning their keep. Mount Vernon's more academically inclined tended to congregate in local libraries to work on next month's homework. Others felt they needed to visit infamous Georgetown for the party life that couldn't be found in Alexandria.

It is only 6:45 on Friday night and senior Art Benke is already having a blast.

Kicking back with the boob-tube Brad Williamson prepares for the long awaited weekend.

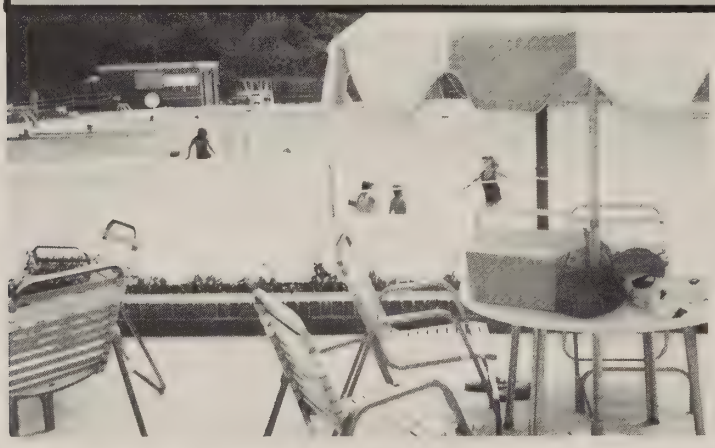
Before returning to the unrestrained chaos that exemplifies Mount Vernon party life, Cari Bersagel and Angela Dorr pause for a quick smile.

Basking in the Summer Sun

What do high school students look forward to most? Aquiring high education? Good grades? Making their mark in the civilized world as we know it? Nope! Its SUMMERTIME, the time when students forget school for three months and enjoy summertime activities.

Most students' first destination is the beach where they spend a week with friends or family. Soaking in rays may have been the main concern for some, but the majority spent time seeking out the company of the opposite sex.

Many students spent the summer working to get extra spending money; some worked as lifeguards while others flipped burgers at fast food joints. In spite of summer fun everyone must face reality and return to school.



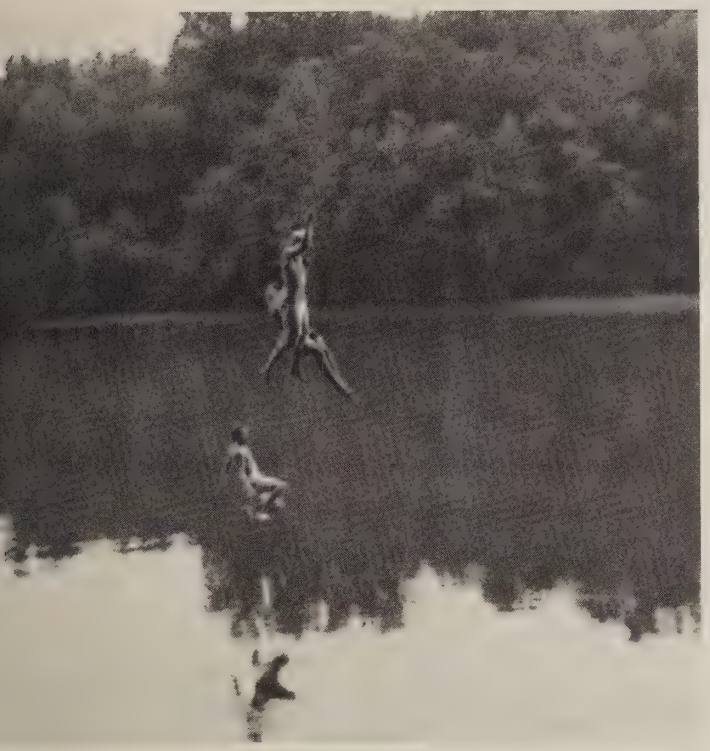
One of the more popular swim retreats is Mansion house swim club.

Laughing with friends Kim Bryan and Hedi Burkhardt enjoy the sun.

Taking a break from the hot sun, Julie, Amy, Beth, and Lisa take a seat in the shade and stuff their faces while on the beach.

Protecting herself from cancer, Liz Warns suntans safely.

As she enjoys the sun, Jill Johnson strikes a pose to attract guys.



Hanging on for dear life, Gunnar Jurgenson, Keith Webb, see who can stay on the longest. On his way down, Matt Bondurant hates life.

"Would you like to buy some suntan lotion?" advertises Candace Hoffman.

Just like a baby, Brad Williamson plays in the sand on the beach.

"The Country's in the Very Best of Hands" croon Li'l Abner(Clint Marsh) and Marryin' Sam(Chris Voeller).

After drinking the Yokemberry Tonic,the husbands show off the tremendous strength they've gained.

"I'm Past My Prime," and I'll never get married laments Daisy Mae(Julie Zimmer) as Marryin' Sam reassuringly tells her its not true.

Daisy Mae and Lil' Abner know it's true love as they sing "Namely You."

DOGPATCH DELIGHTS

Li'l Abner, a joint fall production of the drama and music departments, proved to be a great success. The Saturday night curtain was raised to a sold out theater and the other two performances played to near capacity audiences.

The cast was headed by Clint Marsh as Li'l Abner and Julie Zimmer as his true love Daisy Mae. Mammy and Pappy Yokum, played by Jennel Pavel and Eric Johnson, really showed what citizens of Dogpatch were like.

Patrick Price and April Braxton, as General Bullmoose and Appassionata von Climax, sinisterly connived to defraud both the government and the people of Dogpatch.

The government's secret weapon, Stupefyin' Jones alias Ashley Austin, definitely stopped the show.

The strong performances and the excellent sound of the orchestra pointed to strong direction from Mrs. Ruth McConnell, Mrs. Lani Eklund, and Mr. Stan Schoonover.

Excited wives, with "second honeymonn happiness kits," can hardly wait to join their rejuvinated husbands in Washington, D.C.

Evil Eye Fleagle(James Roberts) announces Li'l Abner's impending marriage to Appassionata(April Braxton).

Dogpatch's demise is lamented by Ann Bersagel and Barak Carter.

"If I Had My Druthers" I'd go fishin' sings Li'l Abner.

...AND JUSTICE FOR ALL!

You may not know these people. You may not even care. Did you realize they were even there? They were there and now are being recognized.

Perhaps the people in question were not the best dressed; maybe all they needed were an old Metallica T-shirt and a pair of blue-jeans. Penny loafers were not the only thing to wear on your feet; British Knights or Reeboks would do.

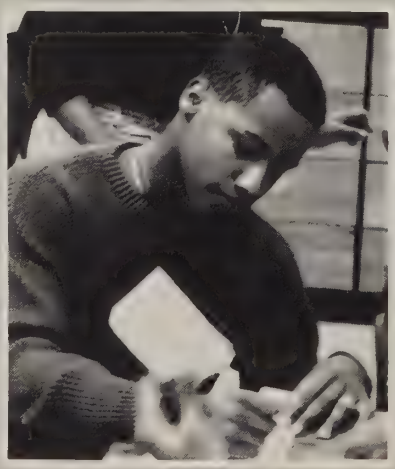
If these people did not participate in all school functions such as student government, clubs, or sports, it was because the jobs they held left little free time.

After a long day at school, many students such as Dan Pullen, Chris Rainville, Lora Jessup, Kevin Anderson, Rita Reed, Patty Dains, LeeAnn Glesenkamp, Russell Hawley, and Laura Niffenegger just like to relax, goof off, and enjoy each other's friendship.

"What homework did we have for geometry? I need to get it done before class next period," says sophomore Steve Mayo to junior Ivan Foldvik.

So he can call home, Derrick Dickens asks Tam Doe and John Willard for a quarter.

As always, Damian Boggan works hard in science.



Enjoying a snack he brought from home, junior Doug Oyer relaxes on a table in Hill Hall instead of going to the cafeteria during lunch.

Kenny Washington finishes the final step as he waxes a wind guard in general maintence class.

Both sohomores, Lawrence Brawner agrees with Grady Taylor that this is a bump lunch!

Enjoying a football game, junior Anthony Kornegay watches the action intently and makes plans to go again the following week.

Mount Vernon's Hidden Stars

For some students at Mount Vernon, there was more to life than just academics, sports, and clubs. Some people chose to go outside the normal high school life and work towards different goals. Some of these included studying art, doing community social work, and serving in the armed forces.

During the school year, people such as Annelies Richmond, Alexis Baden-Mayer, Mark Avery, and Daniel Shaeffer strived towards their ultimate dreams. Annelies Richmond and Alexis Baden-Mayer worked with the Washington Ballet. Early experience influenced them into hoping for a future career in this area.

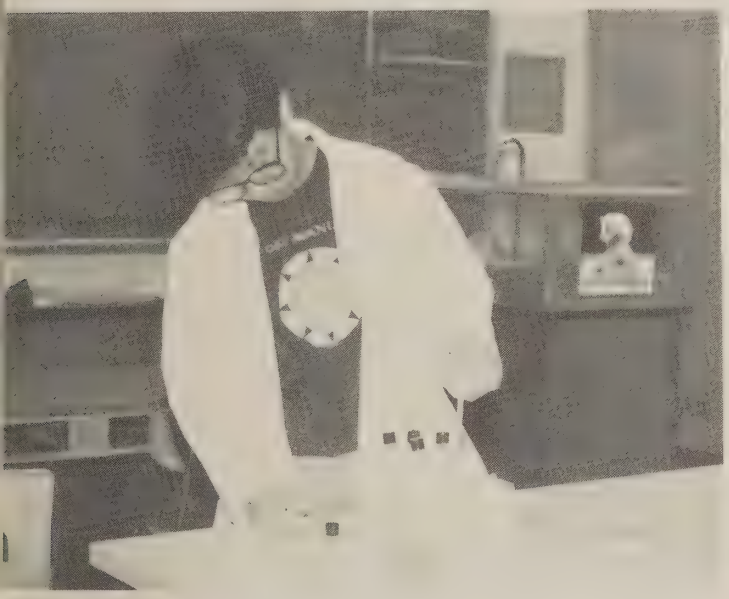
Experience gained in these careers will be of use in other fields of work in the future. The dedication and hard work put into these activities may not be seen now, but they are of great future value.

Move over Maria Tallchief; here comes junior Annelies Richmond, an excellent ballet dancer for the Washington Ballet Company.

With the hopes to make it to the professional ranks, senior Lee McLeod has been studying photography for three years.

Proud to serve in the United States Coast Guard, senior Daniel Shaeffer stands ready to take on the high seas.

Be all you can be in the U.S. Army Reserves serves a motto for Mark Avery who has been in the reserves for the past two years.



Always ready to help others, Binh Luu works hard at Mount Vernon hospital as he assists the doctors and nurses.

Two years of experience pay off for Alexis Baden-Mayer, a member of the Washington Ballet Company.

Dan Shaeffer and Mark Avery finished high school and moved onto the armed services. Mark Avery served during his senior year in the Army Reserves, and Daniel Shaeffer served in the United States Coast Gaurd Reserves.

Binh Luu has spent his last four years putting others' welfare before his own as he worked at Mount Vernon Hospital. Lee McLeod has turned a childhood hobby into a lifetime dream by working as an Associate Press photo assistant and a free lance photographer.

These individuals knew what they wanted to do with the rest of their lives and worked extemely hard through their high school years to achieve those lifelong dreams. Although these exceptional students didn't receive the glamorous recognition or prestige of sports heroes or academic scholars, what they did was just as important. These people made self sacrifices to entertain us, to protect our country, and to contribute to our community.

These people, and all those who are not noticed in society, deserve gratitude for doing things that people appreciate but generally take for granted.

As he stands tall with the Mount Vernon Marching Majors, Stefan Gahler enjoys the new opportunity to participate in after-school activities.

With the upcoming gymnastics meet on her mind, Petra Tholl from the Federal Republic of Germany, tries to concentrate in English class.

Foreign Affairs

Although Mount Vernon always has an international atmosphere, four exchange students provided an additional foreign flair this year.

Stefan Gahler, a student from Hermeskeil, Trier in Germany said, "It's interesting to experience a different culture and life in a foreign country. Also, after-school activities make school fun here. In Germany it's boring!"

Also from Germany, junior Petra Tholl became involved in many activities including the German Club, Girls' Gymnastics, and the International Social Society.

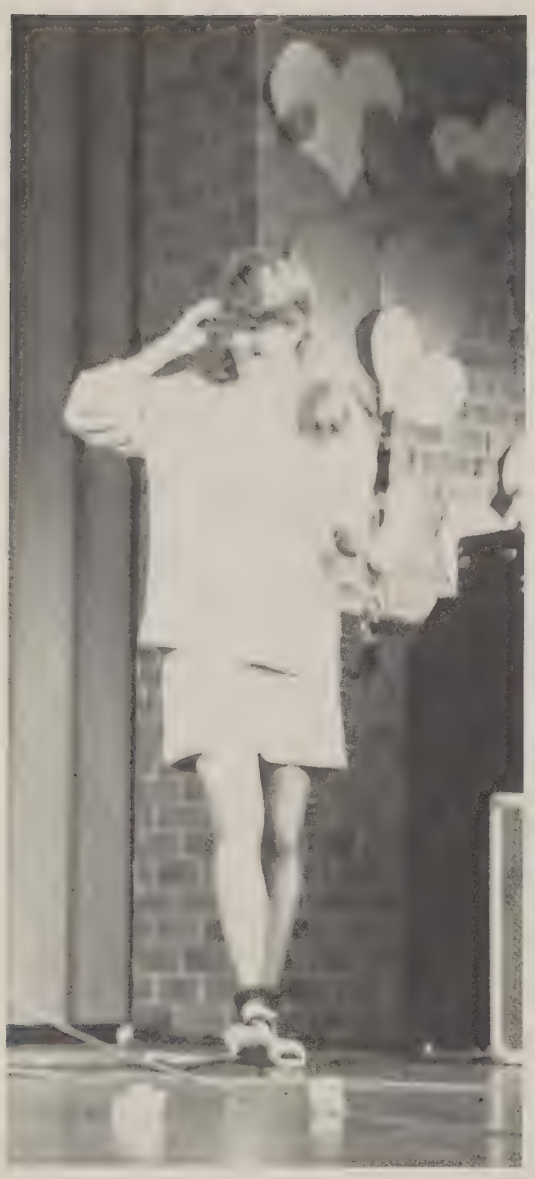
Peter Hall, a junior from North Stockholm, Sweden swam on the swim team and worked as a staff photographer for the Em Vee High.

French Canadian France Chasse graduated last year from her high school in Quebec, but she decided to come here as a senior to learn about American culture and to improve her English. "I really enjoyed competing in track," she said.

All agreed with Petra that "schools in the United States are much easier than schools at home, where students usually take ten to fifteen classes at a time."

After placing fourth in the women's shot put, France Chasse relaxes with '86 graduate Karen Moore as they watch the male throwers.

Spending time with new friends in the senior courtyard, Stefan Gahler from Hermeskeil, Germany, doesn't seem too pleased with the American school food.



Homecoming Queen, Noelle Valley, reveals her true identity to the crowd and her date, as a band wally.

Devil worshiper, Omenita Damiena, better known as Sarah Carlson walks to greet her next victim.

All three of these contestants are stumped by the questions the bachelorette from West Potomac has asked.

"I honestly cannot believe she said that!" comments Lisa Lawler about Shannon Bilbray during the Dating Game. Meanwhile, Wendy Schaffer tries to think of a good response to the question. .

Trying hard to hold in a burst of laughter at one of the bachlorette's response is Andy Obermeyer.

Wanna Date?

It isn't every day when a group of public and private high schools get together and do something out of the ordinary. When they do, it often turns out to be a smash hit. This occurred with the many year tradition of the dating game, sponsored by the SGA. The game brought participating students from Mount Vernon, West Potomac, Edison, Hayfield, and Bishop Ireton.

Even the audience got to participate with the door prizes that were given away. Chadwicks, Krispy Kreme, Subway and Multiplex all donated prizes.

The real fun of the evening came from the funny questions, such as "Sing a song describing the person next to you," and "If you were a fruit what would you be?" that were asked. Even more hilarious were the answers given!

Thinking hard for the best response to get the date and prize are Antonio Robinson, Kenny Washington, and Dewitt Myers.

"Ooh, I've got a medallion just like that," says Leila Harris to her date Kevin Menz as they receive their prize.

A look of confusion comes across David Jessee's bewildered face as a group of young girls rush the stage.

Warming up for the big afternoon game, this 1954 baseball hero shows an audience of fellow players just how to hit a perfect homerun.

Times and fashions sure have changed, as 1982 graduate Carla Blackmon demonstrates.

Anniversary

During the past five decades Mount Vernon High School has witnessed many changes: a new building was needed to house the expanding student body, four different principals have held the reins, social standards and moral values have changed, and a tidal wave of students of all races have entered our halls. As the alma mater of over 20,000 graduates, the school has provided many memories for all students to carry in their hearts.

To jog the memories of graduates and to provide a glimpse into the past for present students, pictures from all decades were pulled from past volumes of Surveyor, facts were researched, and body copy was written to compile this anniversary section. The pictures and body copy in this section were designed to form a time capsule of the mood of the school and of the nation during these 50 golden years.

An integral part of the school organization, the Patrols of Mount Vernon, founded in 1947, guide student safety.

The prestige of being crowned Homecoming Queen can be seen in the eyes of Barbara Fitzpatrick, 1970's choice.

Everyone Lives For the Good Ole Days

The young and the young at heart have fond memories of the "good ole days." Their most cherished thoughts remain untarnished by time or change. It would seem that the sweetest memories are those of high school.

How often do you catch yourself speaking of the golden years, when kids knew how to have fun and music wasn't noise?

Remember when you "walked twenty-two miles, in snow, up hill (both ways), barefoot to school?" or when "Big Bertha from Band" chose you "for TWIRP week." Perhaps, you remember "kneeling in front of Mr. Landes" to see if your new skirt "met the floor and the school dress code."

Maybe your memories are not so tramatic or ironic as these, but they do have strength, character, and vitality to carve out a special place in your heart and endure the years.

If one was to gather all the memories of the students that once attended Mount Vernon High School, he would have the most accurate account of life for the past fifty years. This history would be like none found in any text, for it will have captured, not only fact, but the hearts, minds, and emotions of the people who created it.

For many, the history of our Alma Mater is held in the pages of the Surveyor, Mount Vernon's annual. Since the fall of 1938, the activities, events, and the people of Mount Vernon have been preserved through pictures. Pictures are worth a thousand words.

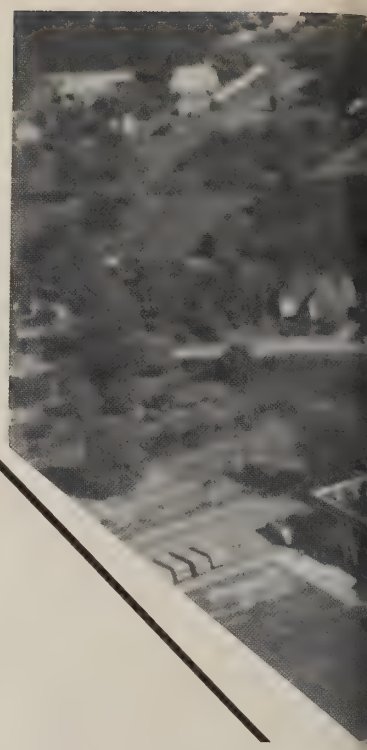
Over the years bits and pieces of our history have been lost or forgotten. Few know the names and faces of the students, faculty, and parents who helped "build" Mount Vernon brick by brick. In fact, few know much about Mount Vernon itself.

Once upon a time, Mount Vernon was a small school set in a rural community. Where there are now fast food restaurants, convenience stores, shopping centers, and apartment buildings; farms, and small family businesses stood. Industry and big business had not yet discovered this part of Virginia.

Mount Vernon was once called by another name. Many continued to refer Mount Vernon as Lee Jackson High School, never getting used to the new name. For over thirty years it served as our Alma Mater.

In 1974, Mount Vernon transferred to a new educational facility. Students began the new school year in a newly constructed and fully modernized building.

Memories aren't comprised of facts, though. They are accumulation of spirit, friendship, dreams, disappointment, pain, embarrassment, love, and experience. It is fair to say that Mount Vernon has provided the basis for our memories and a safe haven for our hearts.



A bird's eye view of our Alma Mater, as it looked in 1962. Since 1962 many changes have been made to Mount Vernon.

Mount Vernon has a strong history. The building of the school took place under President Roosevelt's work programs.

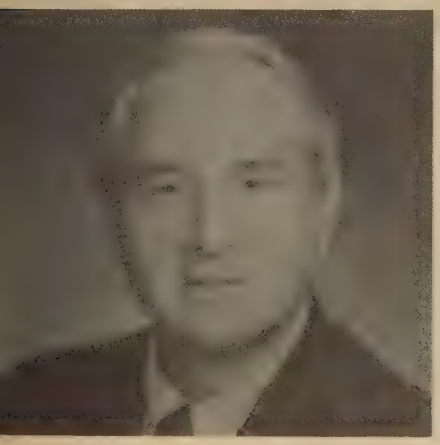
Getting into the spirit of Homecoming, Mr. Landes dons the apparrel of the 60s.

As he dictates a letter, Mr. Cox thinks about the many things he has to do.

Main Authority

The job or position as a principal leads to a variety of things when schooling is involved. Mt. Vernon has always been a high school with dedicated principals at its head. Since the early 1940's, when Mr. Granville Cox stayed on as princpal when the school's named changed from Lee- Jackson High to Mt. Vernon High, there have been only three additional principals: Mr. Melvin Landes, Mr. Thomas Hyer, and Dr. Paula Johnson.

Over the years the student body has contributed to make Mt. Vernon a suitable place to learn; but, throughout the 50 golden years, the strong and able principals have made the "sun shine in the HALLS OF M.V. HIGH."



While eating lunch, Mr. Hyer speaks of the way school lunch is appetizing to him.

Fully succeeding, Mrs. Johnson stands proud.

As she carries her "homework," Dr. Johnson stops for a moment.

"The man who makes it work," serves as an apt description of Mr. Hyer.

Mr. Thomas Hyer, Mt. Vernon's principal from 1974-1987.

Back For More

Believe it or not, here in your own school are teachers who attended Mt. Vernon. A few of these teachers agreed to share memorable moments from their school life.

In the 50s "we had no gymnasium or cafeteria and classes were held in school busses," recalled Miss Jean Allen, while Mrs. Susan Godfrey remembered "band practice on the dirt road behind the school."

During the 60s, Mr. Steve Kendall "intercepted a fumble and ran 56 yards for a touchdown" against Falls Church. "Having the old boiler bulldozed out of the basement" provided excitement while Mrs. Susan Heeter attended.

For Mr. Derek Steele, "winning the State Championship in basketball" during the 80s brought great pride. On the lighter side, Miss Diana Drumheller won't ever forget "totally filling Mr. Propps' office up with ballons."

Mr. "Boo-Boo" Brent. "You can talk to me, among other things, counseling is my job."

Mr. Randy Slack. "Driving is an education most love to learn."

Miss Diana Drumheller. "Marketing education is a busy course to teach."

Mrs. Susan Heeter. "Teaching English is a job for the wise."

Mr. Derek Steele. "So you're caught in a sweat suit. Psychology leads to more than one thing."

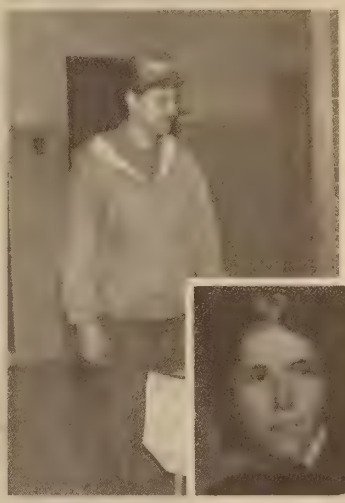
Mr. Bo Jones. "When you're teaching math, you have to look happy."

Jean Allen. "After teaching and coaching for 24 years, I still don't know what to write."

Larry Carpenter. "Everyone needs help so I'm here to give it to you."

Steve Kendall. "I always have trouble with this xerox machine and all my math work won't fit on the board."

Brian Taylor. "Physical education and coaching are what I teach the best besides advice and self-control."



"A String of Pearls," Song,

The 1940's, T.V. was a box with no picture and the radio was the most read book in America. The radio was the ultimate source of information, entertainment, family togetherness, and MUSIC.

In a time of economic prosperity, every household had two or three radios. The radio stations ran programs for the family, and every HAM was tuned to the station that offered the most "up to the minute" news. When "the folks" weren't looking, the dial moved to the station playing Glenn Miller.

Humor and pranks were in abundance when Nadine "Chicken" Godfrey and Gordon "Beachie" Beach were around.

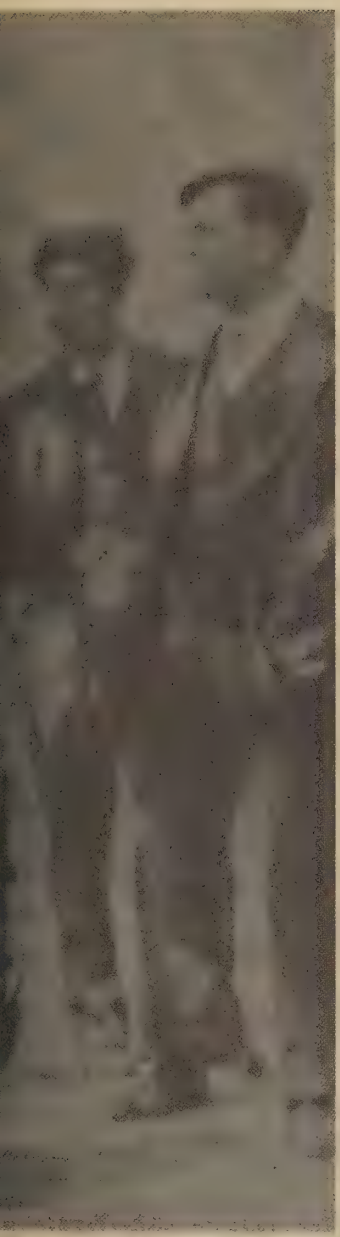
Students in 1945 found the library served not only as a source of study, but also as a place to socialize.

Homeroom representitives supported the American soldiers in 1944, by selling WAR BONDS and STAMPS.

Dance, and Remembrence



The low mellow sounds of the clarinet filled the dance hall. As the BIG BAND began to play couples strolled onto the dance floor. All were prepared to Boogie Woogie their blues away. The dance was the Lindy; the song, Pennsylvania 6-5000.

This was the era of the Big Band. People went to dance halls to dance to their favorites. For those who couldn't make it there, pushing the couch against the wall and dancing on the living room rug would do the trick.

Many danced to the works of Goodman and the Andrew sisters, but it is "A String of Pearls" by Glenn Miller that holds true.

The "IN" look of '42 was the "two-piece" bathing suit.

Than Saddle Shoes

We all have our ideas of what the 40's were like: zoot suits, saddle shoes, Big Band, and the Big War. The forties were years filled with unforgetable moments.

But who were the people who filled the classrooms of Mount Vernon? What of their friendships? What were their joys, sorrows, and dreams?

The students of Mount Vernon, during the 40's, were career minded individuals.

They had plans to to go directly into their preferred field of work rather than go to college. Their job choices reflected the times. Most women wanted to be librarians, secretaries, and nurses while the men planned on careers in medicine, military, and engineering.

Do you think they planned to dress alike? Sure, they were on the basketball team.

The Fifties:

Many considered the fifties a time of youth rebellion; there were changes occurring everywhere.

Kids were breaking set "traditional" rules. Hair grew longer and the tough "greaser" look sprung up everywhere. Attitudes toward authority figures deteriorated, and kids began listening to the "devil's" music by the likes of Buddy Holly and Chuck Berry.

The wild behavior of the 50's kid was depicted on the big screen. Adults viewed with utter shock the mass changes in society as seen in movies such as Blackboard Jungle and Rebel Without a Cause.

Just goes to show you, you can't always believe what is in the movies. "The more things change, the more they stay the same."

Mount Vernon's Very

Every high school is the mother of at least one great success story. Mount Vernon has produced more than its fair share of successes, but the one exceptional individual that stands in the spotlight is Senator Charles Robb.

Senator Robb graduated in 1957, and was a familar face around MV through his participation in sports and other activities.

Upon graduation, the Senator attended Cornell University on a Virginia scholarship. He later received his law degree from the University of Virginia.

Having served as Virginia's governor, his political aspirations brought him to the Senate in 1988. What's next?

The 1960's were a time of many changes. Wise men with revolutionary ideas were out to change the world. Many felt these men's dreams were far from reality. Yet these "crazy" dreams took seed in every corner of our country.

Still there was doubt about the peaceful acceptance of blacks as equals. Many believed that integration would lead to outbreaks of violence. But at Mount Vernon there was little violence.

In fact Mount Vernon opened its doors graciously. The students never took the time to notice the differences. They simply saw the similarities.

After the 60's and Woodstock there wasn't much left to do. Grasping onto the ideals of the "hippie," a new generation was born...the Flower Child. Peace, Love, and Harmony abounded. The flower child developed a new concept of thinking--FREE! "Free man, 'Free to Be You and Me,' free love, buy one get one free."

But, alas, the flower child wilted away as thinking changed from free to space--"you're in my space." Dancing came back and music had a new FUNKY beat that filled the discos. From Old To New

"Perhaps the greatest challenge is acceptance of change, adapting our lives to unfamiliar patterns." - Surveyor 1974

We have all experienced being the "new kid" on the block at one time or another, but can you imagine being that lost student more than once in your high school career? Imagine yourself a senior, prepared to rule the school, coming to the realization that it is new territory to you.

In 1974, Mount Vernon was not just Mount Vernon anymore; it was NEW and BIGGER. With this new monstrosity came spacious classrooms, a tremendous gym and carpeting. The carpeting made rest and relaxation more comfortable than ever, but it was the space that was most appreciated. As one student said, "It's nice for a change to have some breathing room and empty space."

Students take advantage of the spaciousness and comfort of the new Mount Vernon.

It's the Same

The eighties generation has taken a lot of abuse; selfish, uninformed, lazy, and unoriginal are adjectives that have been pinned on the teenager of today. The absence of originality, is not for the lack of trying; there was that "Valley" thing. Yet that, in its own, held many similarities to parenting decades.

Signs of the past, tie-dyed shirts, antique cars, and various types of music, can be seen everywhere and are the rage. It is, the sixties, perhaps, that have influenced today's youth the most. Instead of stunting America's youth, this influence of past generations has instilled an appreciation for history and a respect for elders.

Showing school spirit comes naturally to Eric Weis, Kaley and Laura Middlebrooks.

Because Mount Vernon has always stood for excellence, students who have attended have taken pride in its reputation and have striven to uphold the honor. However, during the 80s, students joined together with increased spirit to support both athletic and academic school teams. Spirit became the motto!

By the mid 1980's, Mount Vernon had established itself as a tough school to beat, with athletic greats like Sean Scott, Lance Doty, and John Rymiszewski. But as the decade came to a close, Mount Vernon's own spirit leaders took the limelight with the Marching Majors dominating most competitions.

With the opening of the school, a whistle was blown and girls' and boys' basketball provided THE sports excitment for the 1938 season. Capturing the title "Champions of Fairfax County," the girls started the golden winning tradition at Mount Vernon.

After beginning in 1939, football's first undefeated season came in 1968. In 1983 Mount Vernon captured the AAA State Championship.

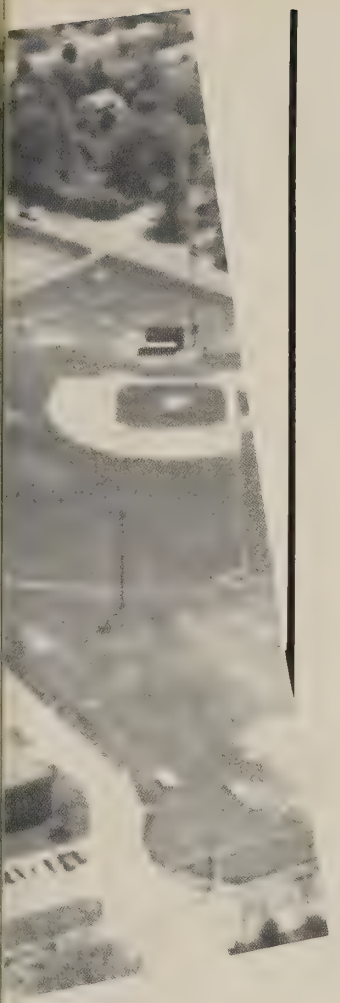
Memorial

Blessed are the memories of yesteryear. Fond of the blissful events that have shaped our lives, we carefully choose what we want to remember. We rumage through our memories, cautiously searching for those which bring us the most joy. Yet, among these pleasurable memories are ones of sorrow and loss; these being difficult to ignore.

We have all experienced the loss of a loved one. Yet none is so tragic as one lost to war. In the past 50 years, we have seen three wars. To these wars we have lost our fathers, brothers, and friends who valiantly gave their lives for us, for our freedom.

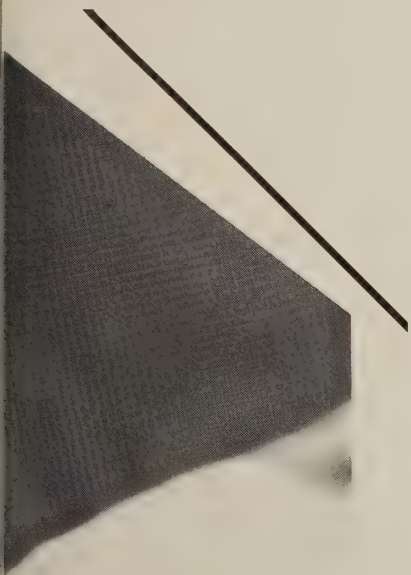
Many of Mount Vernon's students served our country overseas, protecting family and friends. Regretfully some never came home. For them we save a backward glance and a special place inside of us.

64-Still Diggin' in Anniversary



This is our Alma Mater as it looks today. What changes are in store for M.V.?

The exultation of graduation shines on 1987 graduate Keith Robinson's face.



Here's to The Future...

There comes a time when we ask ourselves, "Is there life after high school?" What does become of all those aspiring individuals who walk these hallowed halls, fill these classrooms with the hopes of gaining wisdom, and write the answers (not necessarily correct) in these texts? Where do they go? What do they do? They just don't disappear.

For most students, four years is a great deal of time to wait to recieve that scroll of parchment that signifies freedom; symbolizes adulthood. To these patient souls, "freedom" is well deserved.

Yet the excitement of graduation is often muted by the insecurity of saying "Good-bye." It is not easy leaving the nest for the first time, not knowing what awaits on the new horizon. As we all find out, a farewell is not final; it is a beginning.

As these young men and women descend the stage and throw their caps into the air, they step into a new era... they begin the adventure we refer to as life. Some will journey down a carefully chosen path as others prepare to follow the yellow brick road.

It is by strange coincedence that every five or ten years, these vastly different roads should cross. Many find the first crossroads difficult and awkward as they fear they have nothing to show for their travels. But farther down the road, these reunions are enthusiastically awaited. These rest stops are no longer meeting places for competition, but rendezvous of memories, good times and old friends.

Success. We all are driven by our desire to be successful. But what is true success? According to Websters dictionary, success is a favorable or desired outcome. As high school students we accept success under this definition. Yet once in the real world we often begin to measure success by means of wealth and possessions. "The one with the most toys wins!"

Eventually, we relearn that simple definition that we had accepted in our youth. Once again we judge others and ourselves on satisfaction from what we have achieved, love we have given, joy, thrill, and rapture we have shared, and memories we have created.

There is a time for reliving the past, cherishing the present , and striving for our future. We dedicate ourselves and our lives to building a better future for our children. One day we will have to trust them to the construction of a better world.

Today we are the future, tomorrow we will be the educators. Like those at Mount Vernon who have taught us, we will teach. We offer tomorrow's youth the wisdom of a thousand minds and the experience of many more. Here's to the future.

Sports

With dedication and determination the athletes of Mount Vernon strode forward to strengthen the pride and enthusiasm of the student body. They pushed themselves to the outer limits to protect and ensure the reputation of the school.

Through blood, sweat, and tears the teams of MV rejoiced in their victories and remained dignified and proud even through their losses. Hours of pain and toil were spent with dedicated coaches in order to prepare for upcoming games or meets with the hope of bringing back news of victory.

School spirit was based upon sports; they were what brought the pride into the students' hearts. It was a different sort of pride that brought the school together as one family with intensified pride and unlavished spirit.

During a time-out, the Mount Vernon varsity basketball team gathers around the bench to get a run down of their next plays and strategies from Coach Derek Steele.

Breaking All Odds

Coach Bruce Patrick was in search for commitment and strong, hard working men. Summer camp '88 determined who the men were and which ones would be honored by representing Mount Vernon for their fiftieth year anniversary. Surprisingly enough, the coach felt that he had a really good team and began shaping it up to once again become the power house team of the Gunston District.

The varsity football season began with a bang of a performance by starting out with two consecutive wins. The football players came out with the attitude, "The days of a 5-5 season record are over!," as expressed by Mel Morgan, number 14.

They were right! Mount Vernon didn't repeat it's last season record, and the coaches and fans were anything but disappointed.

SERIOUS, SPIRITED, AND VARSITY

Cheerleading is anything but fun and games. It's a serious business involving many hours of not only practice but extra effort to be a member of what one might call a service club.

New faces,new attitudes, and new uniforms got the squad and its sponsor, Mrs. Gayle Deaton, psyched for the year. At the first pep rally the crowd was initially so dazzled and enthused by the cheerleader's 50's style dance to "Good Golly Miss Molly" that the students and faculty quickly yelled alongside them to their cheers, chants, and athletic pyramids.

Throughout the year, the crowd showed tremendous team support along with the cheerleaders during the games. They JAMMED, ROCKED THE HOUSE, and SANG OUT FOR THE MAJORS....

Off the track and court, the cheerleaders continued their working obligation. They welcomed the new freshmen to high school at the Freshmen Orientation, sold ads for the football program,and always represented Mount Vernon at many important events. As in previous years, these cheerleaders put forth a great deal of effort. Their work both on and off the field and court was commented on by the head coach of football, Coach Patrick. "I wish I had time to get to know all the cheerleaders. I feel as if they aren't given enough credit...I'd say they were the 'UNSUNG HEROS'.

FOREVER PRIDE

This year's Junior Varsity football team was filled with hard work, dedication and support. Although the team did not have a good seasonal record they still kept a strong feeling of pride. "I was very proud of their accomplishments and survival through the long practices," complimented Coach Randy Slack.

The biggest problem that this year's team was faced with was a lack of participation. The JV team was very small and many played more than one position, and most switched back and forth between JV and Varsity, which meant two consecutive nights of playing ball.

The players often had to practice hard on Thursday for Varsity and then the same night play their JV game.

There was a feeling of fatigue by the end of the week, but still the players kept going. Many of the players are looking forward to their try at the Varsity level and will definitely prove to be an asset to the team due to their experience, and effort. Throughout the year they maintained a good attitude, pride, and hard work habits which will in turn carry over into next year.

AT THE HALFWAY MARK

"Majors are movin' up goin' straight to the top!"

Made up of all sophomores, the Junior Varsity squad represents the halfway mark in cheering. Many started as Freshman Cheerleaders or as Girl's Basketball Cheerleaders and now, having made the Junior Varsity squad, they each hope to become a part of the big league-Varsity.

Under the sponsorship of Ms. Brenda Lamb and with assistance from Ms. Gayle Deaton, the junior varsity squad kept themselves very organized at all times. They not only performed well at practices but at games as well.

Although the cheerleaders showed great organization and great athletic ability, there was one low aspect that the girls were determined to improve. "Jumps were the weak point at first," commented Tara Nester. Extensive jumping drills became a part of both their practices and pre-game warm-ups. There was a lot of help and assistance from other experienced cheerleaders. The outcome . . .? Seen on both track and court, each member improved dramatically.

By continuing their effort and dedication, the "big league" won't be too hard to make. They've got what it takes to continue the cheerleading tradition.

Brand New

In addition to a new freshmen football team, Mount Vernon also received a new coach for the team. Coach Sean Scott,the new assistant coach, is an alumni of Mount Vernon and played football while here. He graduated in 1984 and was a member of the 1983 state champion football team.

Although it was a tough season, the team played hard and stuck together through many problems, both on the field and off. All the players practiced as hard as they played. Team practices started two weeks before school opened and they continued to practice six days a week. "There were some great wins and some tough losses," stated coach Scott.

This year's team was small, young and learned a lot. They followed the role model of the older players and of the coaches. For one thing, they learned how to commit to an activity and stick to it once they started. The team realized what hard work and the true meaning of sportsmanship really means. The addition of Sean Scott helped the team in ability and spirit. Coach Scott summed it all up by saying , "there is a lot of talent to develop here. "

In spite of the team's losing season, the players' hard work resulted in great improvement and all are looking forward to showing off their skills as members of next year's JV team. "Adversity helped to make us all tough," said Jason Carroll. "Next year we'll be ready to roll."

FROSH START

Choosing the frosh cheerleading squad was done in a new way this year. In the past, frosh tried out in September during our first week of school, were given uniforms on that Friday, and then sold football programs at that night's varsity game. Not too much changed but the little that did made everything seem easier.

The competition squad from Mount Vernon went to Walt Whitman School and gave the frosh an idea of what cheerleaders do and what privileges and responsibilities come with representing MV.

"HI, MOM!" yells Jenna at her SECOND football game of cheering.

Welcoming fans, frosh cheerleaders go straight to the top!

Who said that we're only Freshmen? Varsity...here we come!

Giving it her all, Christy Dodd continues cheering for the Majors.

Joy Bellamy, Christy Dodd, Shannon Bilbray, Jenna Larrabe, Dawn Wilson, Wendie Schaffer, Brenda Sharitz, Ericka Weigel

In August the girls showed up spirited and set to make the squad. Tryouts were held; the girls were nervous and practiced up until their number was called. Finally, MV's new freshmen cheerleading squad was chosen.

Each was thrilled and they became fast friends and worked well together. "Each one was proud to be an MV cheerleader!" exclaimed Ms. Gayle Deaton in excitement.

The frosh may not have had big turn outs at games, but the girls gave it their all no matter how empty the stands, no matter what the score.

Dedication and pride made it all worth while. Each girl was so different yet became a unit when dressed and out cheering together.

With all the energy and spirit, the cheerleaders provided the baby Majors with the support needed for a sucessful first season.

DRIBBLE...SCOOP...SCORE

This year's Varsity Field Hockey team went farther than any other team has in the history of MV. The team came within one game of Regionals. There was a lot of hard work put into this year's Varsity and Junior Varsity teams.

They started practice in August, working out in the heat and sun. There was practice everyday after school and on Saturdays.

In order to earn money, due to lack of funding, the teams came early Saturday mornings to clean-up our stadium after home football games. This was hard work but no one complained, as it helped pay off expenses.

There was a lot of spirit and unity among the teams. This was brought together with a new tradition of having a hockey dinner the night before a game. Each person brought something to eat and there was always a variety of food to choose from. The players enjoyed these nights because it gave them a chance to talk and relax, while at the same time getting them psyched for the upcoming game. The next day when arriving back at school, the teams participated in celebrating their victories together.

A new improvement to the Junior Varsity team that helped boost moral was Melissa Ervin, the new coach. She helped the players develop their skills for the following years.

After winning a game, Cristin Fitzpatrick, Leila Harris, and Dana Hensley walk away smiling.

In The Long Stretch

This year the Cross Country team had many great individual achievements. Each member made at least one personal record this season. Although the team did not make it to Regionals as a whole, due to an illness, three members of the boys team qualified. Senior Rob Kelly, Junior Evan Riley, and Sophomore Ric Leffler made it because they finished in the top fifteen at the District meet. Unfortunately the team came in fourth and only the top three teams go to Regionals.

There was a new coach this year who helped the team. Coach Sullivan came to Mount Vernon late in August as an instructional aid and the new coach. Later on he took over as the new History teacher at Mt. Vernon. Before coming, Coach Sullivan was an assistant track coach at W.T. Woodson where there were three other coaches. Coach Sullivan admitted, "I enjoy being the head coach and I am looking forward to doing it again next year." His future plans are to build on this year's team and to improve it overall. Coach Sullivan feels that the individuals will improve on their own from experience. Much support was given by many to help him get started.

Practices started in August. The runners participated in a circuit weight training program for conditioning. In addition to weights the team ran distance and did track warm ups. The meets were held at Fort Hunt, Lee District, and also Burke Lake Parks. The team went to out-of-state invitationals as well.

Almost there, Ric Leffler and Rob Kelly race to warm up.

Warming up is the most important thing for Rob Kelly who stretches out before he runs.

Building Block

Even with a new coach and experienced, veteran players (most being Seniors) in the top four positions, the girls' tennis team couldn't quite keep up with its competition. Yet they gave it their all, and did manage to be successful against Hayfield.

The team worked well with its new coach, Sharon Rucker, and was excited about its new team mate, Kim Garber. Coach Rucker was a teacher's aid for Coach Coder last year and helped coach the Junior Varsity softball team. Kim came to Mount Vernon as a senior and managed to earn the top seat on the team and played first position.

The girls worked long and hard during practice and it showed as they played with pride and determination.

In spite of let downs, no one on the team was discouraged. A part of the psyching process may have been slowed down by the fact that they only saw the coach at practice and right before the matches started, due to her working at a different school. However, they continued the fight up to the last match and kept up the spirit.

With seniors moving on and only a few experienced underclassmen moving up, next year will be a rebuilding year for the team.

Ready for the spike, Kim Garber gets set.

Confident of the team's victory, Jennifer Ocean waits anxiously.

Practicing her forearm, Rachael Yost swings with power.

Fans look nervously at the tie matches.

With determination, Kim Garber plays to no limit.

In the Rough

The best way to sum up this year's golf team was to call it, "a building year," according to Coach Brian Taylor. The team consisted of only eight people, three of whom were seniors and the rest being sophomores. Coach Taylor also commented that, "There are great things to happen with this team." The year ended with an average overall score. The playing potential and ability of the younger players is above average and will show in next year's playing. Coach Taylor is looking forward to them and the upcoming freshmen for future teams.

One of the brightest spots on this past year's team was senior, captain Craig Forgash who went to regionals. He was also a four medalist at districts.

The schedule was an arduous one for the golf team, and competition was tough. Practices started August the tenth, and there was practice every day from then on. The matches were twice a week, with the season consisting of four weeks. Golf is the shortest seasonal sport, and certainly one of the hardest. The sponsor for the Mount Vernon golf team was Woodlawn Country Club who has sponsored them in the past. All the matches and practices took place there. Their support gave the golfers the confidence they needed throughout the year.

With the ball in place, Scott Tippins is set for the perfect stroke.

Court Crusaders

Winning and finishing number one in the Gunston District, Mount Vernon's court crusaders kept up last year's victorious record, which included the regional title as well as a visit to the state tournament.

Determined to go again, especially with old yet new coach, Derek Steele, the team played vigorously and strong willed throughout the rigorous season.

Many long, sweat-filled hours were put into this year's game plan. Conditioning included weight lifting to enhance their arm and leg strength, aerobics to enable the players to last an entire game, running long distances in a short amount of time, and of course playing time was incorporated into their practice.

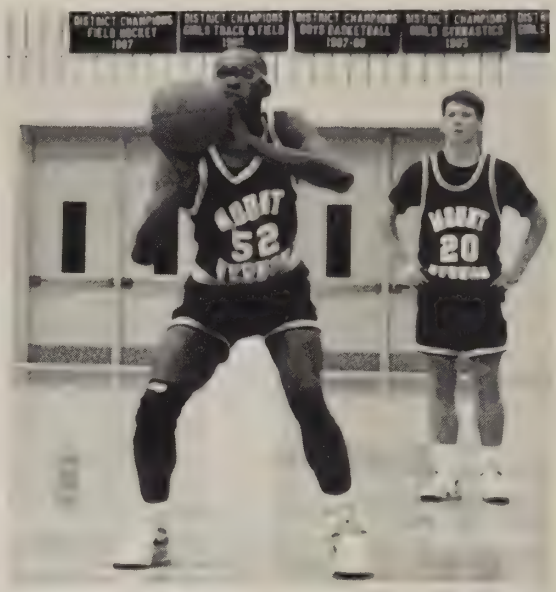
Superior players for MV were leading scorer, Lorenzo Bryant, who was seen at every game sweating up and down the court, defensively trying to steal the ball and offensively scoring on every opportunity, and Richie Treger who was the best three-pointer shooter. Most of the season's games were terribly close, but Richie was usually the one depended on to pull the team ahead with his three-pointers.

The Major crowd was always behind in the stands cheering on the team, from the first two points to the last critical shot. Winning was everyone's prerogative.

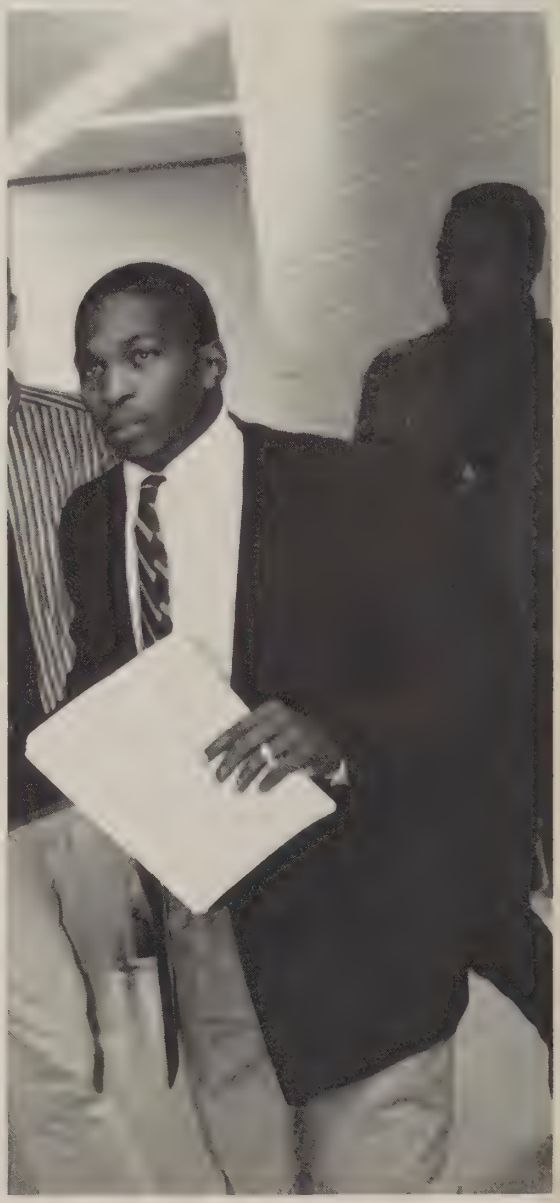
Biting his lip for luck, Scott Tippins shoots for two.

While blocking a Bruin, Tony White practices his fancy footwork.

With back-up Richie Treger, Jo Williams has no doubts.



With his all-time look of steel, Coach Steele heads for the court.



Major players watch anxiously to see Craig Dell make the foul shot.

Running through a flock of Seahawks, Lorenzo Bryant makes a lay-up.

Lorenzo Bryant's up for the tip-off.

With his ever famous SLAM DUNK, Junior Richardson shows the guys how it's done.

Up for the rebound, sophomore Jeremy Nelson has his hands in place ready to get control of the ball before his West Potomac rival can.

His feet on the line and hands on the ball, Derek Williams sets a foul shot.

Determined to make it over his Wolverine blocker, sophomore Tony McPherson gets the two pointer needed to win the game.

In awe, sophomores Brian Bronson and Mike Carter watch the ball glide into the hoop.

Junior Champs

Following in the footsteps of the Varsity team, this year's Junior Varsity players had an excellent season. "They were consistent throughout the year," commented Coach Eric Brent. The boys won the Gunston District Championship game against Hayfield by two points, which was too close for comfort. With determination and a commitment to win, the J.V. Majors worked hard for their deserved victory.

The team prepared for this season early on by participating in a summer league which was similar to that of the Varsity team. Next year many of the boys will move up the ranks to the Varsity Summer League in order to condition for the upcoming season.

Three lucky, talented members of the J.V. took another step up the ladder and moved up to the Varsity team at the end of the season. This enabled them to learn more, make new friends, and have a chance to play with the big boys.

With aggressive defense, Mike Carter keeps a Wolverine out of range.

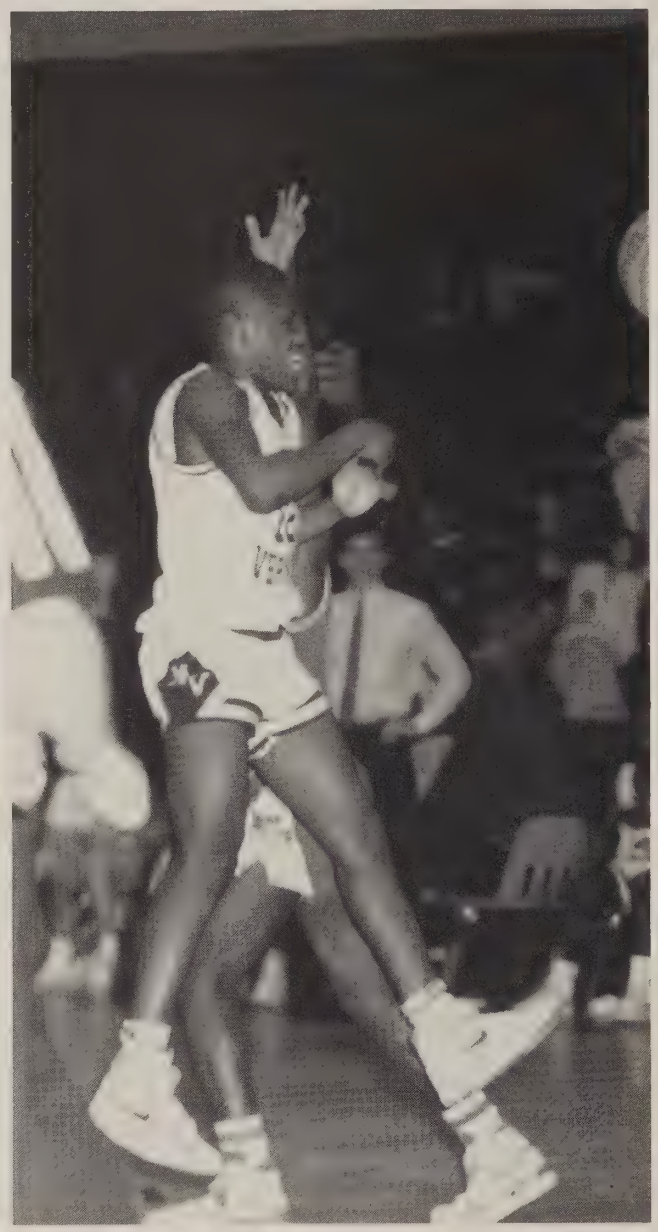
Not Just Any Frosh

"As long as they played hard and learned, it really did not matter if they won or lost; but overall the team had a great season," described Coach Brian Curtain. His first year coaching here at Mount Vernon proved to be a winning one as his baby Majors came in second place in the Gunston District.

The team was very pleased with the excellent job Brian Curtain did of coaching their newly formed team. The players' eagerness to learn and to have fun during the season impressed Coach Curtain who recognized that,"the success was due to their ability to function as one."

At the end of the season Brian Brunson, Fernando Bowen, Walter Cummings and Danny McCormack left the ranks of the "baby frosh" as they moved up to J.V. level.



Showing his joy by dancing, Walter Cummings gets into the groove.

While in time out, Adam Cunningham looks at the score as he rests.

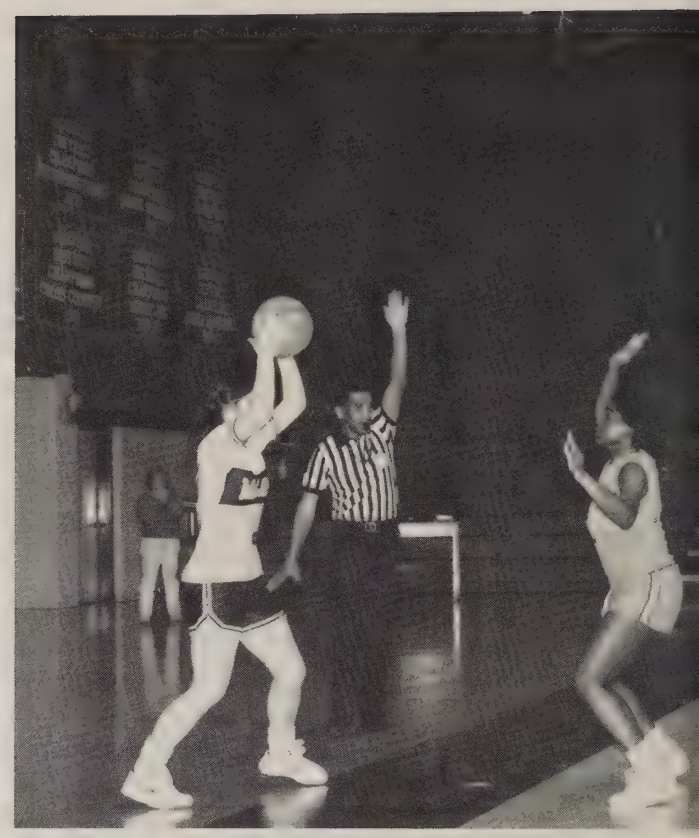
Rough Start

Plagued with many injuries and illnesses this year, which hurt the beginning of the season, the Girls' Varsity Basketball team got off to a rough start. After the injuries were healed and everyone got over that dreaded flu or bug, things started to pick up.

The Lady Majors participated in the Madison Christmas Tournament and placed sixth out of eight teams. They competed against many good opponents, which helped the players gain confidence in themselves individually as well as a team.

With only four seniors on the team the coach was forced to move up J.V. players to make up for the lack of people. Despite the youth of the bench and its lack of varsity experience, the girls came together and played well at the varsity level.

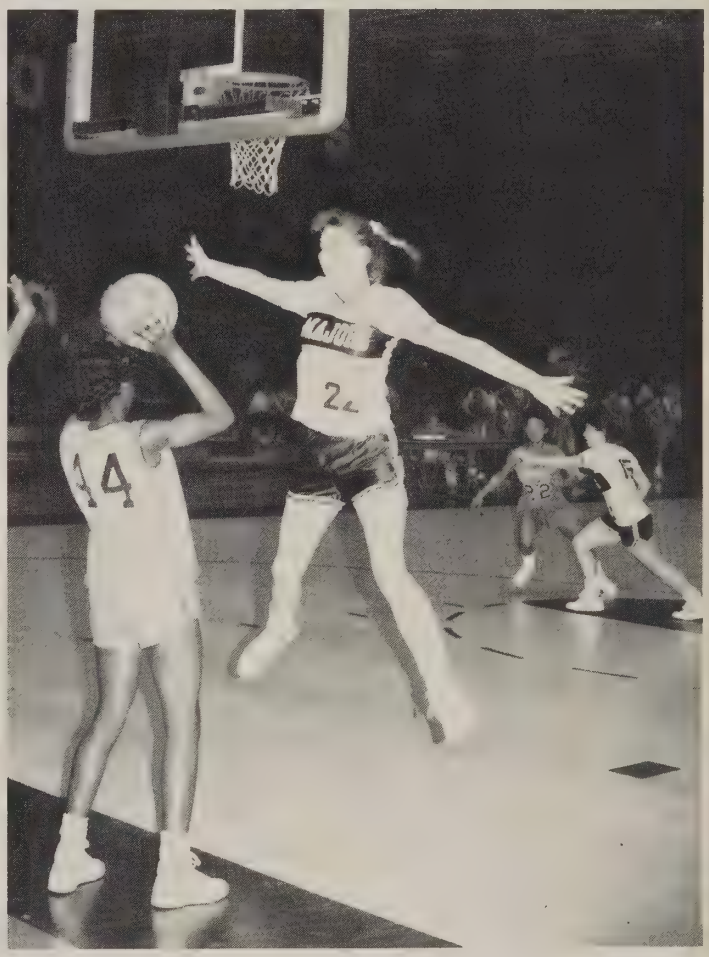
The team ended the season in second place in the Gunston district and proved who they really were by advancing to Regionals.



Watching the signals, junior Becky Young prepares to throw.

As the opposing Hawk attempts a block, senior Pam Brigham sends the ball up while junior Angie Robinson waits to grab the rebound if necessary.

Instructing the girls on the moves needed for the next play, Coach Young makes sure the point is clear.



There is no way the ball can get past junior Merel VanZanten as she puts her whole body into the block.

On the way up for a smooth layup, senior Candee Zepka eyes the basket.

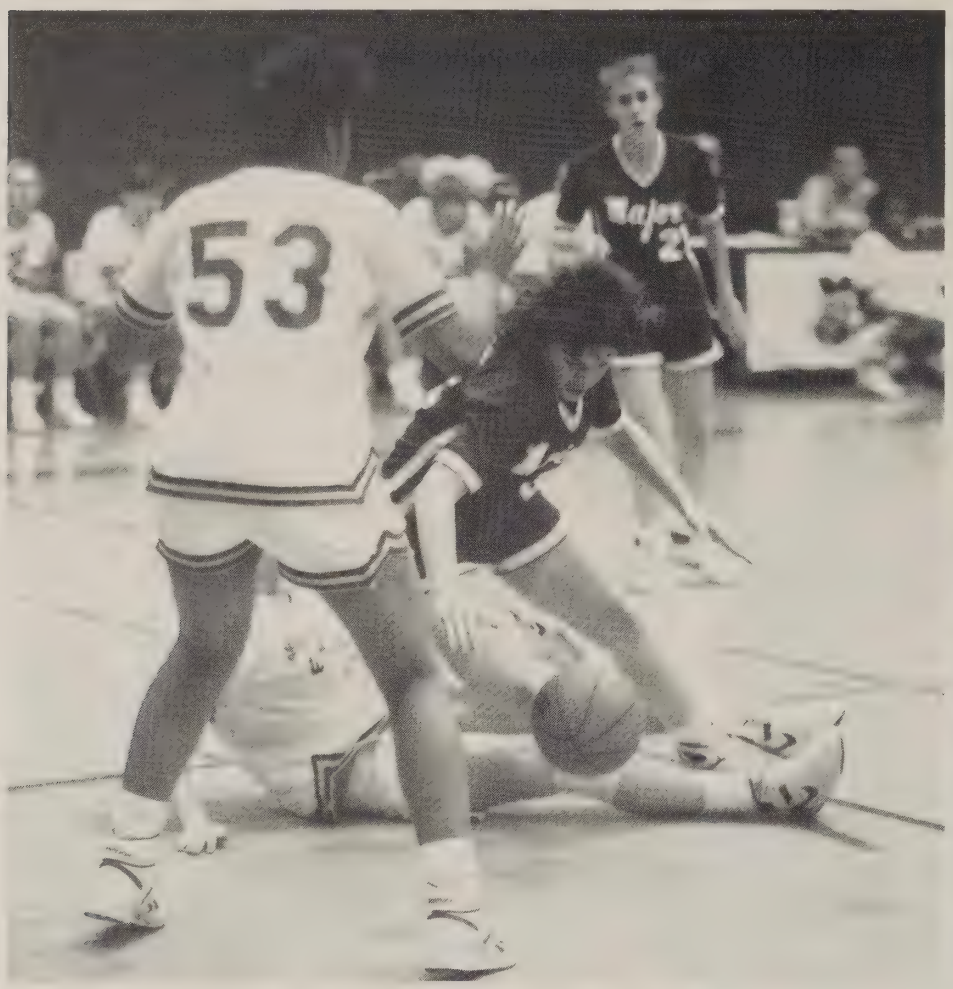
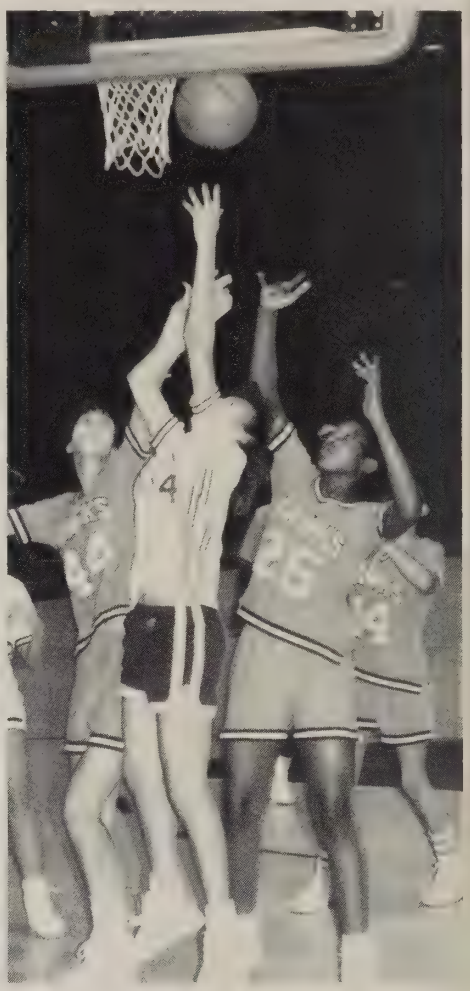
"Better hold on tight," thinks junior Angie Robinson as she looks for a way to escape from the guarding Hawk and go up for two points.

Driving for the loose ball on the court, freshman Stacy Albright tries to out-smart her Wolverine opponent by making a diving dribble to get control of the situation.



Through the Hawk's defensive line, freshman Michelle Weigel works her way to the hoop.



Dribbling Dynamos

The girls on the Junior Varsity team, through a lot of hustle and determination, clearly showed that they were out to win.

Although this was Coach Walker's first year as an MV coach, she successfully pulled off a triumphant season with a third place finish in the Gunston District.

Many unenthusiastic participants abandoned the team after the tryouts and the first rigorous practices. With such a small team, many of the players had to play an entire game. As a result the season and competition was tougher than expected.

However, throughout the season the remaining players concentrated on keeping a positive frame of mind. Despite some problems and a few losses the team came together for their ultimate strong finish. They played better, not only as individuals but as a team. "Miss Walker pushed us to do better, which made it easier," said Katie Buckley.

Dribbling past her defender, freshman Theresa Yalch goes on to score.

As she taunts, sophomore Ashley Hieneman fakes out a West Po rival.

Determined to keep the ball in play, Stacy Albright gives the ball an extra umph while thinking fast.

Ready To Climb

Most of this year's Girls' Basketball Cheerleaders were freshmen; and by being a cheerleader in the first year of high school, it gave them the chance to be noticed and to make a name for themselves. In addition, more girls were given a chance to gain the experience needed to try out for next year's Junior Varsity squad.

Much work was put in by these girls. Not only did they cheer both Junior Varsity and Varsity games two nights a week, they also managed to hold practices to improve even more and to work on building better and bigger pyramids.

The cheerleaders had an added touch to their entertainment; that little addition was Coach Jones' daughter, Sara. The fans enjoyed her exuberance and she helped to make long, hard games worthwhile and fun for everyone.

Sponsor Ms. Gayle Deaton commented, "The young squad was inexperienced, but with hard work they improved over the season. Each one is now ready for the next step up."

Making It A Sport

The first thing that comes to mind with competition cheering is pyramids, flipping, dancing, and just pure energy and excitement. That is exactly right and this year the sport began at M.V.

At first glance one could easily define each person as dedicated to the sport. Their eagerness to get things rolling began in June. They learned back hand springs, maniacs, heel stretches and basket tosses. A routine was put together and the girls were off to compete for the first time. The hard work paid off! the squad came home with two second place trophies.

The squad was small which made it harder to compete; however, when competing, they challenged the score sheet and not other groups. The first year squad definitely made a name for themselves.

Towering pyramids allow the competition squad to become giants over the opposition.

Mission Year

Defeating the wrestling Rams in their first seasonal match began the Major's mission. That win broke a fifteen year losing streak against the Rams and started a turn-around in the wrestling tradition by staying undefeated in their first two matches.

The Majors took a slight fall-out with early injuries to some of the wrestlers which forced them to forfeit those specific weight classes. Since matches are decided by the team score, more pressure during matches was put on the shoulders of the higher weight classes to win in order to keep the score up.

During this year's Christmas tournament at St. Stephens, the Majors walked out proud with three first place winners, one third place, and one fourth place finisher.

Most of the varsity team was Seniors; each wanted to make a name for himself before retiring his singlet here at MV. Hodges placed second in the region and went to States. Junior Imani Lee dominated in the heavy weight division and also wrestled in the State Tournament.

Knowing he's in control, Steve VanMetre gets a good grip.

Junior Grapplers

For most it was their first year of wrestling, so most of the Junior Varsity's matches ended in an understandable loss. It was a year to learn and perfect the moves needed to become victorious and to get first hand experience with competition.

The wrestlers had the advantage of having at least three coaches if not more. Some days one could walk into practice and the room would be filled with alumni ready for a workout yet eager to help the new-comers with new moves and pointers to make the moves effective; however on usual days the wrestlers were left with their JV coaches Jim Poythress and Prince Hill, as well as head coach Brian Taylor, who led the entire assembly of wrestlers.

All of the Junior Varsity wrestlers will move up to the varsity level next year. Each one will be be eager and ready for the chance to develop his skills and the challenge of confronting more experienced opponents.

WET ONES

Keeping the winning tradition alive, the boy's swim and dive team continued to live up to their four year district title. Their hardest meet was against Thomas Jefferson. Even though they won, it was the closest any team had come to beating them.

Seniors were a dominating force this year, scoring most of the team points. Underclassmen served the victorious team well, and, with more experience will prove to be a major part of the team in following years.

The newly built George Washington Rec Center boosted the team. Because practices and seasonal meets were held at this site, travel time was saved and there was more room. Coaches and especially team members all enjoyed the great change and the benefits aided in team spirit.

Due to the hours of practice, the swim team definitely keeps friends together. Sophomores Michele Cataldo and Malorie Southworth show that practice can be fun as well as work.

Another gasp of air is all junior Kari Caroll needs to make those last few breast strokes to the finish.

Splashin' Around With Spirit

On her way to executing a great dive, Cherie Yadao is psyched.

Spirit and togetherness provided a focus for the girls swim team. They centered on getting to know the new members and better aquainted with the old ones. Something new this year was secret pals; the girls traded candy or gifts with someone before each meet to help psyche them up. "We were closer together," said senior Martha Hayden.

All this brought about an improved performance by the team throughout the season. The girls dropped times more this year than in past ones. "They showed much enthusiasm and worked hard this year," commented Coach Bo Jones. New members proved to be an asset to the team as well, for they had experience and great talent. The team stuck together this year and was a dominating force in the district.

The Right Track To State

By continuing a general tradition, the Mount Vernon track team ended their season by finishing with the top teams in the district.

The team ended fourth in the region this year and advanced eleven people to State, where the Majors were well represented in a variety of events. In the regular season the boys remained undefeated and the girls lost only once.

Weather conditions forced pressure on the athletes as many teams competed for available indoor practice time. Despite this, the members trained on their own in addition to drills, technique work, running and lifting with the team.

Coach Skeeter Jackson took over the leadership of the team after Coach Mark Bendorf stepped down in preparation for leaving Mount Vernon.

With a strong start, Aisha Johnson takes off during the relay.

District champ Cindy Miner sweeps over the high bar with talent.

In anticipation for the state meet, senior James Colbert perfects his long jump by scoring high at district and regional competitions.

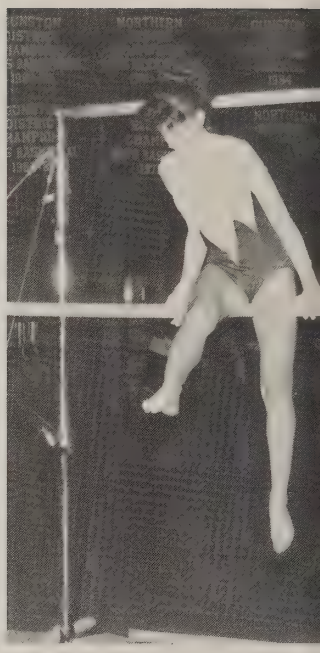
Balanced Beamers

The uneven bars, balance beam, horse, and floor events were once again in constant use by this year's girl gymnasts. Each was working towards putting Mount Vernon's name back on the charts. Over the past few years, the Girls' Gymnastics team suffered in competition from loss of participation or due to the fact that there were only one or two truly good and experienced gymnasts; however, it seems as though the 1988-1989 team began a new trend with several good gymnasts.

Meg Chase was the one gymnast who stuck out among the others. As a freshman, Meg qualified and competed in the gymnastics regional meet. Others on the team did well placing the team fourth in the district.

An addition from a distant country was also a member of the team. Petra Tholl was able to give a few tips of her own while learning some new tricks.

New coach Ms. Barbara Clark who helped the gymnasts advance and is looking forward to redeveloping the pride in the sport said, "The girls were great! Lots of effort and enthusiasm came from the young team."



Performing with grace, Katie Van Valen takes every move slowly.

To catch the judge's eye, senior Donna Kaufman adds a little pizazz.

Concentrating on balance, junior Aneshia Fiddermon works on mastering the wonders of the balance beam.

Always trying new stunts, Meg Chase perfects a shoulder stand on the balance beam.

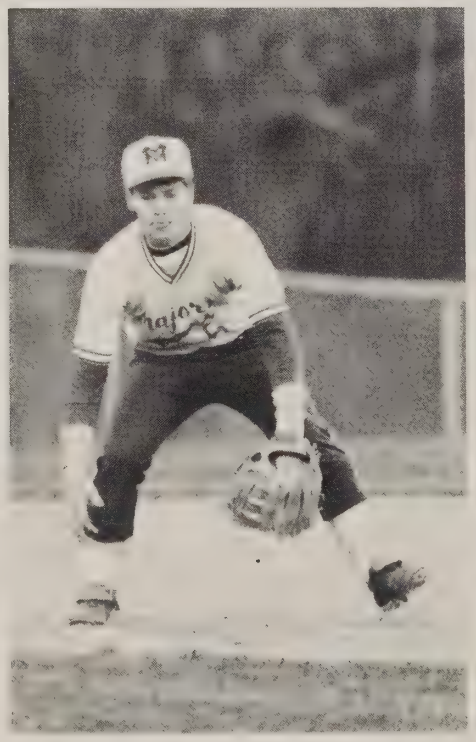
Super Sluggers

With ten returning Varsity players and six players moving up from JV, Coach Jim Sparling expected his team to have an excellent chance of clinching the District title. The team showed great depth both on the field and at bat.

In spite of their inexperience, the JV players proved to be equally strong. The experience gained gave them the skills needed to fill the shoes of the graduating seniors.

With the speed of a gazelle, senior Shane Harris outraces the ball.



Reaching for the grounder, shortstop Richie Treger concentrates on sending the ball home.

As he holds his breath in anticipation, senior Mike Bowers prepares to connect for yet another base hit.

Proving to be one of the district's best pitchers, Mary Carpenter practices her whipping fast ball before the game.

Determined to bring in runners, Martha Heyden plants her feet firmly as she waits for the pitch.

Diamond Babes

Returning as Gunston District Champs and with Mary Carpenter as their most dominate team player this year, the Varsity Softball team held on to their winning record.

The Junior Varsity team consisted of mostly new players along with a new coach. All concentrated on learning and gaining experience to be prepared for next year and the move up to Varsity.

First baseman, Tracy Nelson waits for the ball and an easy third out.

In an attempt to show off, Eric Ferreria knees the ball as captain Mike Hill approaches to block the opponent.

After the winning goal, Huey Tran receives a glorious thanks from his fellow varsity teammates.

There to make a save, sophomore Brian Hatchl comes from behind.

Kickin'

Aiming to establish their new team in the district, the Boys' Soccer teams had to start over; with only nine returning Varsity players, they had to function as a new and different team.

The J.V., with new coach Mike Sullivan, concentrated on playing together and working hard to improve in their ability.

Overpowering his opponent, Vince Owusu uses his head to get ahead.

Row 1: Randy Thomas, Sitheng Phaunsouth, Hoang Tran, Brian McGough, Ryan Hill. Row 2: Chad Marsh, John Ojaletto, Fawad Matin, Chris Sammer, Eric Ferreria, Eric Krofah. Row 3: Coach Bill Stackhouse, Lisa Swain, John Defreitas, Mike Kubasiewicz, John Adamson, Mike Hill, Frank Owusu, Vince Owusu, Huey Tran, Alli Beethuis, Coach Rob Sanders.

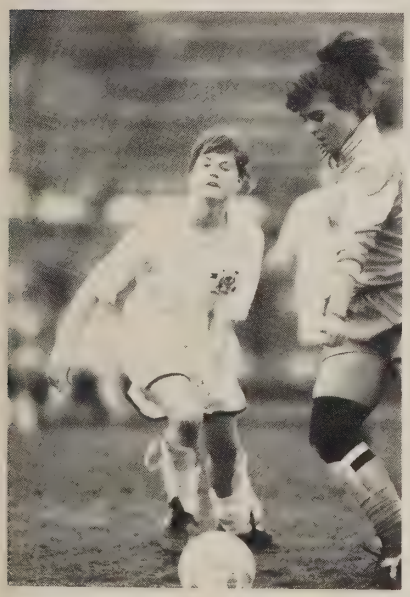
Row 3: Tanya Taylor, Katie Buckley, Carolyne Fitzpatrick, Parnell Pearson, Beth Minert, Julie Locke, Andrea Blumenfield, Coach Berel Bruffey.

All in step with the game, junior Aimee McManus leads the chase as she gets the ball away from her North Stafford opponent.



With determination, senior Melissa James makes an attempt to steal the ball.

After heading the ball with great talent, senior Joanne Wilson watches as the goal keeper can't get the ball in control.

Major Scorers

With mostly returning Varsity players and some moved up from J.V., this year's Girls' Soccer team hoped to improve on last year's record.

Returning to her alma mater, Berel Bruffy came back to coach the J.V. team.

Trying to interfere, Karen Smith attempts to keep the ball going.

Whether we realized it or not, education was the purpose of attending school everyday. As we looked past after-school activities and our own social calendars, we saw the reason behind Mount Vernon—our education. Academics were the most important and sometimes most stressful points in our lives.

The countless reports we wrote, homework assignments we completed, and endless tests we took provided the building blocks for our lives as adults. With the pressures of college and careers, we tried to excel in all academic areas; whether it was math, English, or auto mechanics, we pushed ourselves to our limits to ensure a brighter future.

It's Our Prerogative!

Electives provided a fun yet mandatory part of high school life. In order to gain enough credits to graduate, a student was required to pass two electives.

Most students took electives, such as typing and gourmet foods, to have a fun class with little homework. Practical skills were taught without the out-of-class time.

Others used electives to take classes such as computer programming or an extra language, that they needed, but otherwise wouldn't have had time for. This gave students a chance to take a course that really interested them.

Other classes took up more time, and had more of an influence on students' futures. Newspaper, psychology, and accounting aroused interest in careers while providing basic skills for the future.

Life in the Stacks

Various people found different uses for the media center; students studied, researched many topics, or just socialized between classes and after school.

Classes used the media center for its valuable research information. The librarians were always available to help individuals and classes find exactly what they needed.

Students also used the media center to study or research during lunch and after school. Both before school and after school, the media center provided a quiet place to get some extra work done.

Between classes, students congregated around the media center; friends could be found hanging over the railings and lounging on the reference material book cases. Although designed for study, it also became a place for friends to come together and socialize.

Excelling Individuals

Advanced Placement (AP) classes are accelerated courses open to all students attending Mount Vernon.

After taking these classes the students were given the opportunity to take a test in that subject offered by the the College Board. Depending on the college, students who scored well on these tests were often exempeted from some required freshmen classes while still receiving college credit in that course. In addition, an extra point five was added to the students' final course average to compensate those who took a college level class.

It's Academic!

IT'S ACADEMIC-1st row: Jennifer Ocean, Amalia Uribe, Mrs. Cynthia Rufty, Allyson Ocean, Eric Johnson. 2nd row: Edgar Trott, Scott Price, Doug Smith, Deidra Whitford.

Eight participants who loved sharing arcane bits of knowledge comprised the "It's Academic" team. They spent many hours after school rehearsing for the actual show by answering thousands of questions that covered all fields of study. Mrs. Cynthia Rufty, sponsor of this active group, dipped deep into her well of knowledge to try to stump the students.

Although all of the members were prepared to represent Mount Vernon, Doug Smith, Edgar Trott, and Jennifer Ocean appeared on the Channel 4 television show because of their ability to come up with the answers under pressure.

Anyone with an interest was allowed to participate in the preliminary meetings, but chances of being chosen to represent Mount Vernon were about three in 1447. In spite of placing third, team members said that the experience was worth the effort.

It All Adds Up

The wide variety of math classes a student can choose from was almost as confusing as the formulas used to solve the complicated problems. The curriculum spanned from General Math to the challenging courses of Calculus. Some students really enjoyed entering the contest of defying problems and even got "warm fuzzies" when they triumphantly produced a correct answer. Unfortunately for some, those "warm fuzzies" turned to freezing chills when they were confronted with any math problem. Many constantly asked, "When are we ever going to need this stuff?" One teacher Mr. Steve Kendall often replied, "For your next test." Whether or not students considered math class as worthwhile, a minimum of two years are required for graduation.

This year the most advanced math course, BC Calculus, was cancelled because interest wasn't high enough to conjure up a class. Perhaps worries over a lowered GPA or ideas of a relaxing senior year swayed the decisions of many students.

Teachers offered help after school and students more competent in math aided as tutors. Will there ever be an open book Math test? Probably not; memorization and practice are what it takes.

Our Own Tiny Europe

Believe it or not, you could actually feel as if you were visiting Europe in Mount Vernon. Take your pick. Would you like a little bit of France, Spain, Germany, or a trip to Roman times? Whichever a student chose, taking a foreign language was really entering a new world. The classrooms were filled with cultural pictures and students' projects that created the atmosphere of a different country. The effect was magnified when the class conversed totally in the foreign language, teaching students to have an ear for the tongue and to perfect their accent. Since taking a foreign language is necessary for college, most students experienced a new culture.

If students were crafty enough to squeeze some "dinero" from their parents, they traveled to France, Spain, Germany, or Italy with their teachers.

Students who stayed with a language for four or five years took an AP course where only the target language was spoken and students found themselves not only reading entire novels, but also writing essays and research papers in a foreign language. By passing the AP exam, some earned a college credit for their devotion.

Exploring the Natural World

Over the years certain traditions have developed to make biology interesting, chemistry less complicated, and physics fun. As in previous years, biology students took their studies outside the classroom by taking field trips. This year the Bio II class went to Lewes, Delaware and Sandy Point State Park in Maryland to collect specimens for further study in the marine ecosystem.

When looking into a Physics class it may look simple: people pushing wooden carts, planning a collision, or observing a wave pool. But Physics is not as it appears; the laws and formulas that explain everyday occurences become difficult and complex. But remember, "Physics is fun!".

Chemistry allowed very little time for fun labs and field trips. Most labs were serious and difficult, requiring precise measurement and careful mixing of toxic chemicals. But seeing students in white lab coats and goofy lab goggles provoked chuckles among students.

With everyone's attention, Mr. Robert Sanders begins his difficult chemistry lecture on figuring the empirical formulas of various compounds.

Stylin' and Profilin' at M.V.

In need of three credits? Cosmetology provided those credits for the girls who took it. First year students had the three hour course 4th, 5th and 6th. Second year students had the earlier classes. Only the serious ones stuck with it; the few girls who took two years planned to take and pass the state board exam. Every Monday students prepared for the exam by taking practice tests. In addition to passing the exam, 1,080 practical hours must be logged to receive a state license.

The cosmetology students learned a variety of skills including perms, cuts, coloring, manicures, shampoo and conditioning. In addition, they were taught about what is good for their hair and what is damaging. These students were indeed dedicated to the class; spending three hours in one class would be torture for some, but not to these determined stylists.

With nimble fingers, junior Angela Williams tries to finish up her model before the bell rings to signal the end of the three hour class.

Carefully sectioning off her customer's hair, Deborah Pruitt prepares to try out the style she learned in class on a willing client.

"I save a lot of money working on my car in shop." David Carty.

What?! Six hundred and some dollars for a brake job? Forget it! Several students didn't have to pay a garage for the work done on their car; these students learned how to do mechanical work in Auto Shop. First year students spent one class period a day in the Thomas Propps Vocational Wing to earn one credit.

Second year mechanics earned two credits for their two hours of class and the extremely dedicated workers earned three credits for completing three hours of work a day.

During class the guys, (girls were welcomed but none took the class) washed cars, did mechanical work, tune-ups, changed oil, and repaired others' cars if the customer, usually a teacher, paid for the parts. The class worked on both foreign and domestic cars; Mustangs, Darts, Fords, and even Mercedes Benz all were repaired by the students under Mr. Dick Shaffer's tutalage. The class gave students the ability to maintain a car's running order, fix engines and repair the body. It was nice to know they would never have to deal with the high cost of labor at auto garages.

Taking care to jack-up his car steadily so he can do some work on it, Anthony Kornegay shows his confidence as John Ochoa and Joe Bell wait patiently for their turn with the jack.

Big Business Blossoms At M.V.

In order to get a headstart in a career or college, most students took some kind of business course. These courses included typing, keyboarding, marketing, business law, fashion merchandising and accounting.

Some students couldn't believe that at the end of the school year they were able to type perhaps 50 or 60 words a minute. It was exciting for others to understand more about the businesses in our great nation and get a feel for the operations that take place. Who knows, Mr. Jay Walker may have piqued the interest of a future CEO.

The skills gained in the business classes provided the the base for a future career in one of these areas. Knowledge of these subjects will also help the students through business schools or college courses.

Distributive Education Club of America was also a big part of the business classes. DECA had a large number of members who competed in several meets throughout the year. Placing in one of these meets was another feather in the cap for students looking at top universities.

Many students took business courses such as typing and data processing to help them gain the skills needed to survive the ordeal of future college term papers that professors require to be typed.

Daily assignments may seem tedious to some, but to Karen Smith they are a breeze as she counts the minutes to the bell.

Do We Have To?

Wouldn't it have been wonderful to complete the school year without having to take either the PSAT or SAT, or at least preparing for and wondering about them? The standardized tests are a cruel fact of life for students. Since scores on the SAT, ACT, and Achievement tests are major factors influencing college acceptances or denials, it was no surprise to learn that students dreaded waking up early and tearing apart their intelligence for the test.

Some argue that the SAT is not really an accurate test of knowledge. Many things decide a student's aptitude, such as peers, maturity, and the desire to succeed. The amount of pressure the test loads on the students may have affected their performance. Perhaps this is why the tests are given many times a year, to ensure an accurate score.

In math and English courses, the tests were mentioned often. Vocabulary lists containing common test words, were memorized. This, along with participating in a prep course, perhaps relieved some of the stress that was inflicted on the testees.

What? One Minute To Dress!?

Upperclassmen sighed a huge breath of relief with the knowledge of the glorious fact that, yes, they didn't have to dress out, get sweaty, and wash their uniforms anymore. Freshmen and sophomores are required to take Physical Education. They tried new sports such as archery and wrestling.

Sports aren't everything in P.E. though. Sophomores got excited about Driver's Ed. Freshmen learned more about alcohol, drugs, and cigarettes in Health, which, among other things, educated students on the dangers of illegal substances.

To Read Or Not To Read

What was the only class guaranteed to appear on every student's schedule? English! Although dreaded by many, without the required English credits a student could not graduate.

In English class students learned to write, speak, analyze, and search for hidden meanings. Essays had to be prepared and vocabulary lists needed to be memorized. A truly enjoyable novel under other conditions, became perplexing if not loathed by students when teachers insisted on tearing it apart "to get at the meaning."

English wasn't always boring. At Halloween, Mrs. Rufty's classes were treated to a few ghost stories, which provided a break from the ordinary curriculum.

Other English classes were given the chance to make group videos. Projects were in abundance, hopefully coaxing students to use their creativity to produce truly original work.

For some, English gave students the chance to shine, for others, a place to sleep.

Though he takes Government, junior Roy Devine stops in to check an historical fact with history teacher Mr. Tim Kerlin.

Reliving Our Past

Social Studies classes are a mandatory but exciting part of the high school curriculum. These classes include World History, Geography, World Civilization, United States/ Virginia Government and History, and Current Affairs. These classes combine the history of the world with present happenings.

Government classes had extra responsibilities this year with the Presidential and Congressional elections. The elections gave students a chance to play an active role in government by keeping track of the candidates, issues, polls, and results. Distributing election materials and assisting voters were common activities of students this past election season.

The history classes this year played an important role in the observation of Black History Month. Several presentations were arranged and many speakers came to better inform the student body of the importance of Blacks in our history. One panel discussion of Black parents who grew up around the nation was even filmed by Channel 7 News.

These classes gave students an idea of the mistakes of the past and how to avoid them in the future.

Along with the added responsibility of heading the SGA, Mr. Eric Glassman begins his geography lesson as Jeanelle Marsh takes out her book.

Always part of the tradition, the Madrigals sing the "Star Spangled Banner" to kick off the Homecoming pep rally.

Activities

Whatever one's pleasure, biology or cosmetology, chances are there was probably a club where one could pursue his or her interests.

Many clubs and organizations gave students a chance to delve more deeply into their academic interests with the guiding hand of an advisor. In addition, there were other clubs not involved with academics, such as Key Club and SAAD, student organizations that aided the Mount Vernon community.

Because of the large number of clubs and organizations, all students could find a place outside of class to socialize and meet new friends who shared their interests.

Cosmetology, a popular elective, is enjoyed by Donita Hankerson and Chiquita Beal, as Demitri Taylor finds more interest in his tape.

Golden Leaders

Governor's School provided a select group of gifted students the opportunity to study with other talented teenagers from Virginia. These students chose a specialized area from the broader fields of performing and visual arts, humanities, and science and spent approximately a month in enriched study. For most of these students, the opportunity to study at a more advanced level than is normally available at high schools compensated for the loss of a month of summer vacation.

Two new organizations, Young Democrats and Young Republicans, gave students the opportunity to voice their political opinions as they learned about the process of electing government officials. By working the polls for both the presidential election and for local contests, these students gained first-hand experience in the democratic process.

Inter-club Council, representatives from all school organizations, joined together to report the needs of their clubs to the SGA. ICC sponsored the May Fest to raise money to help finance the various organizations.

Selected students who possessed outstanding academic records were chosen to attend Girls' and Boys' States where they participated in a mock Virginia government. "Participants must be prepared to work hard, but the experience was worthwhile because of the great people you meet," said Amalia Uribe. "In addition, it gave me a perspective on how to run for elected office, which is one of my future goals."

The Student Government Association provided an essential service to the school by coordinating and promoting club and nonathletic activities. In addition, the SGA handled balloting for school elections. By performing multiple tasks within the school, this group played an important role in improving relations between students and faculty.

Clubs for Everyone!

Again this year, SADD was a successful organization. This year students exhorted against drinking and driving and encouraged the wearing of seat belts. They held several activities including the Haunted House that they hosted on Halloween. This event gave the area kids a safe and fun place to be on Halloween. Their other project this year was having members of the club stand outside in the parking lot checking for student seat belts use. Those wearing seat belts were rewarded with a free Slurpee coupon from 7-11.

The science clubs, Chemistry Club, Plant Club, Unbeaten Path, and Bio II Club participated in many projects. Chemistry Club, always one of the biggest groups, had a number of guest speakers come and talk with them about chemistry futures. The Bio II club enhanced their studies with a trip to Delaware early in the year. Here they tested the water and studied various sea life. They got a real taste of what it was like to be a marine biologist.

The Plant Club kept the greenhouse and the courtyard in top shape. They were always found working in the greenhouse after school: watering, waiting, and watching!

The Unbeaten Path was a small group involved in sharing specific interest in the Biology field. The group was created last year by senior, Martha Heyden. Mrs. Hatch sponsors these bright young students who, unlike most of us, find biology one of the most interesting parts of our curriculum.

With the big turnout in these clubs one can obviously see the enthusiasm in our science department.

Helping out at the SADD safety Halloween party, juniors Leah Ramberg and Jenny Mckay are enjoying themselves while providing fun for others.

As a new senior at our school, Donna Kaufman helps to keep this youngster safe on Halloween night as he bobs for a marshmellow.

One Step Ahead

Key Club, a select group of students, provided service to the community by collecting canned food for the needy and making weekly visits to the Mount Vernon Nursing Home. This dedicated group of teenagers brought joy into the lives of many people.

"Visibility Through Service" was the main theme of the National Honor Society. They worked to promote academic excellence in the school and community. Projects sponsored by the club included "A" Day and the Brain Bowl. Services provided by the students included the Honor Roll breakfast and after-school tutoring.

The Math Honor Society was composed of students who maintained a 3.5 grade point average in math throughout the year. Members shared their expertise by providing math tutoring.

A relatively new club, the Tutor Club, was designed especially for students who were willing to devote their free time and academic strengths to help other students do better in the classes in which they are having difficulties. This group was very much appreciated by students who saw improved grades.

In addition, tutors found the experience rewarding. "I don't mind helping out at all; I actually think it's kind of fun seeing how much I really know," stated senior Wendy Otoole.

For students excelling in English skills and wishing to help others in this area, there was the English Academic Awards Team. The team, created by English teacher Mrs. Janet Mosher, was another successful club that focused on helping others improve and achieve higher goals.

Esse Non Videri

Since colleges require foreign language for admittance, large numbers of students signed up for a course in languages. Students showed that they felt foreign languages were fun by record numbers participating in language clubs and honor societies that engaged in many cultural exchanges. The French and Spanish honor societies challenged each other in a crucial reputation-holding volleyball match. Due to some school restrictions, plans for a cultural food exchange were limited and the classes made the best of the situation.

Early in the year, the classes participated in the second annual Olympics of the Foreign Languages. The activites included hockey, biking (with a simulated "Tour de France" through the Alexandria area) and soccer. With the large turnout and the enthusiam the event generated, this is sure to become an annual event.

The honor societies are usually composed of students who have maintained a 3.5 grade point average in their language studies. In most of the foreign languages, a fifth year student is able to automatically become a member of the honor society regardless of his past or present grade point average. Many students saw this to their advantage and were pleased with the way it worked out.

Foreign language is not really needed to graduate, but most students agreed that after a year of language, the ability to speak and read in a language other than English instills pride and provides a passport to other opportunities. Many students found visiting foreign countries more enjoyable because they were able to communicate with the natives of those countries.

Marketing, Service, Prestige

Mount Vernon DECA Chapter is the second oldest Marketing program in the state of Virginia. The chapter's rich heritage has yielded many outstanding leaders, civic projects, and awards. This year the club participated in all events offered through Virginia DECA. The year got off to a great start with the Fall Rally held at Fort Hunt Park. Other activities sponsored by the club included the Employer Banquet, fashion shows, and a civic project with the Mount Vernon Nursing Home.

The Student Advisory Council helped out with inter-school relations with other area schools. These five students went to monthly meetings at the Area I office to discuss mutual problems and their solutions with students from other schools.

In the academic scene, the Math Team was a group of students who competed bimonthly against 15 other schools in the county. At the end of the year, the top three students moved to the regional competition.

The Future Business Leaders of America became an active group this year. Business practices were discussed at organized lunches and at meetings.

A new club this year, International Social Club, planned many activites for the year including international parties where members studied various countries and sampled food of that country. The members of this club were, unexpectedly, not all minortities.

Coming Together

An increased number of participants proved that the Fellowship of Christian Athletes was successful. Members met on a weekly basis to discuss subjects such as families, God, dating, and friends as well as individual concerns. They also listened to speakers and joined with other area schools for games and good times.

The Black Cultural Alliance, which is open to all races, was formed to increase student awareness of Black history and culture. Members of this club took a field trip to Howard University and held a Parent-Student Dinner.

The 10th Grade Leadership Group was composed of students who were recognized as students who were willing to devote extra time to many different clubs and organizations or who showed strong leadership qualities

The Commended Students, a new addition this year, recognized a small group of seniors as outstanding students. "I was honored to be chosen and I hope this group will continue to exist at MV," said senior David Tyler.

The HERO club, which developed as an outgrowth of Child Development, conducted a safe halloween program and tutored at Riverside Elementary. Students also gained practical experience by sponsoring a day care center.

Members of VICA, part of the vocational program, participated in regional and state competitions.

It's a good time

Although the Mt. Vernon Chamber Orchestra was small, it were highly visible this year. Many fundraisers, which included selling candy, donuts, and Christmas pointsettias, were held to raise money for the end of the year trip, where they competed in festivals. Members also participated in a project called "play for pay." Select members played for the Legislative Dinner and all members played at the Washington Post Educator of the Year Award at the AT&T building. Many members participated in the Solo and Ensemble Festival, which gave individual musicians a chance to compete for superior ratings, as well as in Senior Regionals and All State, special orchestras that required auditions.

Our drama department, led by Mrs. Lani Eklund, had a successful and creative year. Students who performed more than 100 hours of quality work for drama were initiated into Thespians, an international drama honor society. This year, the Stage Lighting Crew grew to its largest number ever! They provided lighting for all events held in the Little Theater.

Sing a Glad Song

"Sit up straight at the ends of your seats," exhorted Mrs. Ruth McConnell, the chorus director, during the many hours of chorus practice.

As in past years all the hard work paid off. The chorus traveled to Atlanta for a competition and performed at a festival at Busch Gardens. Several choral students made it to Regional Chorus and three advanced to All-State.

During the Christmas season, the chorus performed at the annual Christmas concert as well as at Woodlawn Plantation and area nursing homes.

The Madrigals provided a unique touch by singing at Back to School Night, pep rallies, home football and basketball games, as well as the regional wrestling tournament.

A joint project of the music and drama departments, Li'l Abner provided another opportunity for chorus members to showcase their talents.

"As a first year Madrigal," stated senior Jennifer Papajohn, "I was surprised by everyone's dedication and comraderie."

Picas, Poems, Pawns, Persuasion

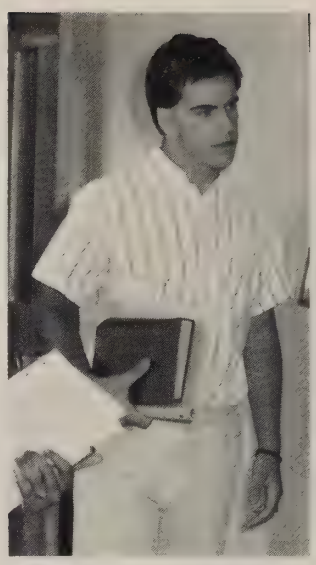
The dedicated staff of The Em Vee Hi worked hard this school year. Athletic events and student academics were not the only topics they covered; reporters also dug deep interviewing and researching to get the inside story, and had a fun time while learning.

Journalism students with a 3.5 grade point average in journalism, and an overall 3.0 average qualified for Quill and Scroll Honor Society.

This year with a large turn out, the Forensics and Debate team competed against other schools in debate tournaments and model congress competitions. The major goal for most members was to qualify for metro finals and to go to nationals.

Members of the Chess Club met every day during lunch to challenge each other in chess. Open to any one who wants to join, this club helped students develop logical thinking.

Students with hidden literary and artistic talent found an outlet by organizing and publishing the Pen and Pallet, which was made up of student drawings, paintings, poems, and short stories.



After finishing his deadline, Joe Radun heads for the printer.

The picture of concentration and dedication, Julie Bertram, Tania Kelekian and Jennifer Ocean work diligently to complete another Em Vee Hi deadline. Staffers often "cut and paste" at the printer's in Brookfield Plaza in Springfield until the wee hours of the morning.

We Make It Happen

Have you ever wondered just who were the people behind this great yearbook? That question was easily answered by the group of students who called themselves the "yearbook staff." The class where they were found was Photojournalism I, II and even III.

These students tried to successfully capture a whole year in pictures and writings. The staff was spotted in many places this year from Lewes, Delaware covering a biology field trip, to the Mt. Vernon Nursing Home for a club function, or in the M.V. field house for numerous activities.

The year of the 50th anniversary was not forgotten; many staff members found pleasure in searching through "ancient" yearbooks from the school's past, trying to find plenty of good pictures to combine for a great reunion section.

If you were to ask staff members what they gained most this year, the answer would most likely be "teamwork." Senior Jennifer Donellan agreed, "We would spend five hours at a time after school somedays just to complete an upcoming deadline, and it actually wasn't that bad because I was there with all my friends." They came together to design and create the best yearbook possible for their anxious readers. Sweat, tears, and joy produced a final product--the book you're holding in your hand.

Sports Editors Monique Filer and Sheridan Vail make tough decisions.

Junior section decisions occupy Mark Avery and Lisa Swain.

Looking for good pictures, these "staffers" keep their eyes open.

Marching Toward the Gold

As always, the Marching Majors were victorious this year. The year started off with a visit to West Virginia for a week of vigorous practices, also known as "band camp." There they worked hard under extremely strenuous conditions, such as early morning practices and very hot weather. They were preparing for many upcoming local and long-distance competitions.

During the year the band did well in all contests entered and particularly stood out in the Woodbridge High School Classic and an overnight contest in North Carolina. Receiving first place and many individual awards at both of these events gave the Majors a definite boost of enthusiasm.

As hosts of the twelfth annual Band Classic, the Majors once again excelled and received many prestigous awards.

This year the band did not go to Florida for the Festival of States Competiton; instead the Marching Majors proudly represented our school on January 20th at the Inauguration Parade in honor of the new President and Vice-President. Band members practiced long and hard for this event braving cold, snow, and blowing winds. German exchange student Stefan Gahler said, "I know we're going to freeze, but I'm proud that I'm doing this."

Mr. Stan Schoonover directed the band and Mr. Jay Walker assisted. For his third year, senior Chris Cannavaro headed the band as Drum Major. Many band alumni came out and helped the band which added to the high spirits of the Anniversary year.

With immense pride, the Mount Vernon Marching Majors pose for a picture in front of George Washington's Mount Vernon mansion.

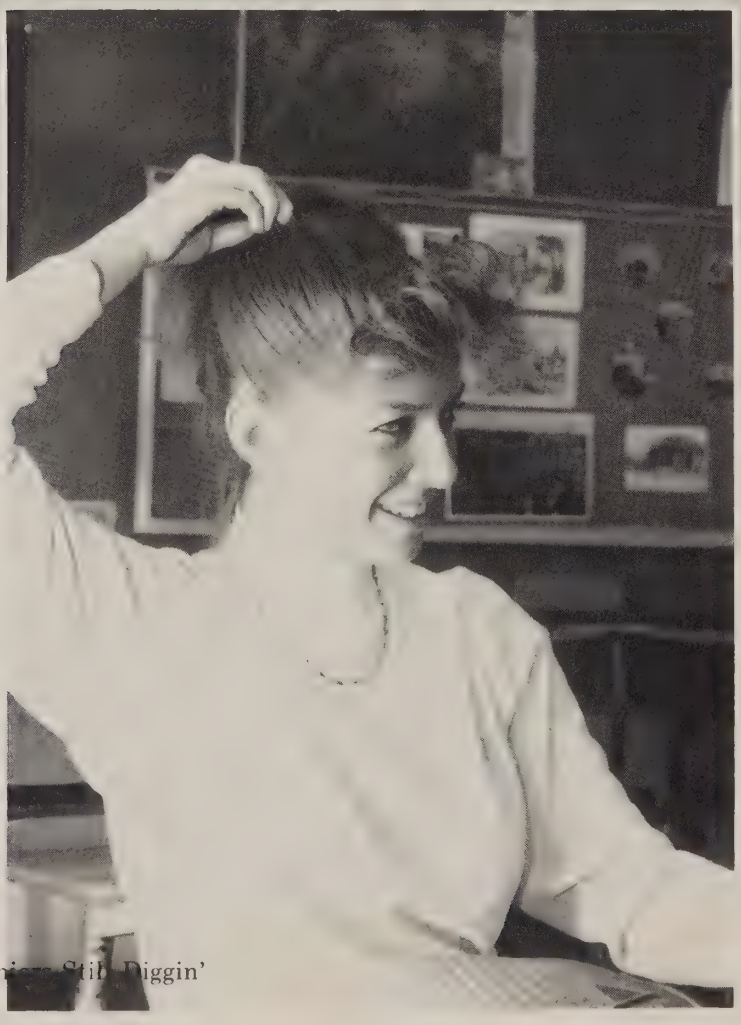
Obviously more interested in her hair than Latin, Kimberly Bryan lets her mind wander from Mrs. Amico's vocabulary review.



As always, Mr. Gordon Hill rallies up the crowd as he announces the float winners at the Homecoming game.

Seniors

The class of '89 stepped to the top of the ladder with style and great enthusiasm that was reflected in all they did. Class pride and excitement pulled the Senior class together during Homecoming activities resulting in a massive wave of class participation from many otherwise inactive students. The idea had clicked; this was the class of '89's last year together. Time had run short; this was the last year to make memories as a class. The seniors did just that—the Major Bunch and the coniving Lee Lancer will never be forgotten by the class of '89.

School days and weekends were also made memorable by the seniors, who captured frozen moments in their minds to be stored and retrieved for later years. The golden class of '89 left a great impression on the up and coming classes; its image will be hard to live up to.

Seniors show their support and enthusiasm as their spirit shines through at the Homecoming pep rally, winning the golden class of '89 the Pep Jug.

"Should I go with Anne Klein or Perry Ellis today?," asks Andrea Barnwell to James Colbert as Best Dressed.

Showing their hopes of being millionaires one day are Allyson Ocean, Doug Cowan, and Jennifer Ocean as Most Likely To Succeed.

While flexing their calf muscles, Renee Ripper and Aaron Ludwig show that they have the Best Legs.

"Oops, look what I've done now!," says Kimmie Beach to Rob Blessing as Biggest Threat To Pedestrians.

All For One, One For All

Class Unity

As a class, we all expected changes from our first and last years together. Our freshman year class spirit was basically at a standstill. We were without a clue on how to behave at pep rallies, school functions, and parties; however, we were anxious to learn.

Our sophomore year we felt more accepted as students of Mount Vernon, and we weren't known as the "babies" of the school anymore. We became more involved with student activities and grew more mature by realizing our abilities as a class.

During our junior year the realization that we were "upperclassmen" became apparent. However, we segregated ourselves into cliques of friends and tended to go our own way. Despite this, the class of 89's spirit was still on an upswing. This led to the establishment of class unity during our senior year.

As seniors we proceeded as one and class spirit was at its best. We realized that in a short period of time we would all be going our separate ways into the world. We were no longer segregated into different parts, but one spirited body joined together as a class. We were the class of 89 and we wanted to establish memories that in the years to come we could all look back on and smile.

Whether it be the new friendships we made and the memories shared or the accomplishments as a class that brought us together we will always remember each other. As we go out into the world, we will always cherish the memories of fellow classmates, teachers, and coach.

At a pep rally, Cathy Curtis and Kent Hull join in with our class to help win the pep jug.

Major's Disco

Our theme this year was the decade of the 70's. The disco atmosphere was achieved by the locker decorations that were complete with flashing lights, music, roller skating dancers, and a disco stage. Despite all the hard work, only a second place was awarded. The wall hanging depicted a disco scene from the 70's.

The skit story followed the Major (Brady) family as Greg Major challenged Lee Lancer to a disco marathon to show his machoness. The skit included a live band, singers, lots of props, and the disco. The skit concluded with the traditional senior dance that made the skit run over by 45 seconds. In spite of being penalized for this and receiving only second place, the fun outweighed the disappointment.

Our greatest homecoming accomplishment was the first place float. Three weeks of work went into building the "Major's Disco" which reproduced the Saturday Night Fever disco. Senior spirit remained high despite a second place finish.

Senior Tradition

Laziness Sets In

As this school year progressed, seniors were faced with many challenges. The academic work was intensified and the extracurricular time doubled. The scramble to get good grades and excel in activities made students very weary. After the first semester, when all applications were in and spring weather was in the air, it was a little bit harder to focus only on school. This has always been an unofficial tradition with every class. Although teachers in no way recognize this slump as a satisfactory excuse, teachers were a little understanding to the student's desires.

With graduation just around the corner, some found it inconceivable to keep up with all of the work. Towards the end of the year some students really tried to get back on track. Hopefully, all seniors were able to pull out of the slump and rejoicingly graduate.

Senior slump hits Matt Bondurant and John Adamson early on in the year; it's only the second day and lethargy sets in.

Metal Maze
Locker Life

Locker banks were the focal point of class activity in school. Students went there numerous times a day whether it was to pick up books or just say hello to a friend. Homework, helloes, and the latest scoop were exchanged there.

Many friends shared lockers. This tended to present a problem at times. Between winter coats, backpacks, and books, it often became hard to find one's next period's homework. Students always had problems opening their lockers which explains the ever present hammer and wrench in the subschool. Some students made their lockers "homey" by decorating them with pictures of friends or music groups. Shelves were even added by a few students to create some organization.

As the last bell rang, students rushed to their lockers to pick up necessary items. Books were shoved in; backpacks and coats were grabbed in a mad rush to get out of school. Five minutes later it was hard to find any students in the lockerbank.

Weekend Revels

Parties Provide Pleasure

The main activity on weekends, at least for seniors was going to parties. During the football season many people held pre-game parties and there was always something going on after the game. Parties gave students a chance to relax and socialize with friends. They also gave students an opportunity to get away from school, the family, and everyday worries. Parties were held in various places ranging from people's houses to empty parking lots.

There were many different kinds of parties depending on the group of people present. Some students were content to just watch movies and eat popcorn while others put their energies into playing games of all sorts. Most students could have fun just about anywhere at anytime. No matter what went on at parties, we will always remember the great times with our friends at parties.

Fit For A King

Seniors Gain Advantages

It has always been a tradition at Mt. Vernon that seniors have privileges that underclassmen do not. These privileges are determined by the class officers and the faculty.

As in previous years, seniors had the opportunity to leave for two minutes earlier than the underclassmen. In addition they had exclusive use of the courtyard.

This year seniors had the added privilege of their own parking lot which allowed them to park close to their subschool.

Many seniors felt that they should have had an open campus for lunch. Unfortunately, this idea was unconceivable. Hopefully, someday the rising senior class will have this privilege.

Chris Voeller takes advantage of one of the senior privileges.

Summer Rites

Study, Trips, Relaxation

For almost every student the goal on the first day of school is to make it to the last day and summer. The three months of vacation we have are used or wasted in different ways by everyone. The more motivated students may use their summer studying ahead for next year's classes or SAT's. The majority of us however spend our summers working, relaxing, or traveling. The entire summer seems to be one long weekend. People head off to the beach, other parts of the country, or even sometimes foreign countries. The dreaded family vacations to Grandma's house become reality, along with site seeing and camp. Eventually all of the trips, partying, swimming, and relaxation become too redundant and by the end of August most students are ready to return to school with hopes of good grades. However, by the end of the first day, the only thought is that there are only 179 school days left.

Heading on another road trip, Steve VanMetre enjoys his summer.

Taking a break, Chris Kohl, Keith Webb, Brad Williamson, and Gunnar Jurgenson wait for a turn on the rope swing.

Political Action

Students Support Candidates

As students begin to mature and reach adulthood, they tend to get more involved in politics. Two groups, the Young Republicans and the Young Democrats were formed as a result of this ambition towards politics. Participation in these clubs required long and tedious hours of dedicated toil. Activities included phoning voters, canvassing, setting up Bermashaves along various roads, and helping at numerous political functions. This work may appear easy and dull to some, but those who got involved found it to be a great learning experience which provided the young enthusiast with a great deal of information on specific issues and candidates.

At many political functions club members met their congressman, senators, and other politically active people. These opportunities gave students the chance to ask any questions or offer suggestions. Being in attendance at functions with high ranking officials, provided students with a feeling of prestige. Students learned that everyone can be part of the election process.

Responsibilities

Too Much To Handle

Senior year placed many new pressures and responsibilities on students. Sokhan Keo shows the effects of trying to make decisions.

Think back to when we were underclassmen; we couldn't wait to be seniors. The upperclassmen seemed so carefree, it was their last year, and they could finally relax. Most of us found out that was far from the truth.

Being a senior had it's advantages, but we were too busy to notice them. Our schedules were heavy and this was our last chance to do well before sending away our college applications. The majority of our time was taken up by homework and study. In addition to many hours of homework, many of us participated in yearbook, newspaper, band, chorus, clubs, and sports. Everything had a deadline our senior year. Trying to meet deadlines proved almost impossible. We found ourselves making compromises- should I study for my test or do my applications? Having a job was almost imperative. Gas in the car and spending money for the weekend was the greatest reason for a job. Life became a neverending series of applications, practices, meetings, and essays. Now that it's all over,we can sit back and have 3 months to relax-and then it all begins again!

Winter Fun

The Ultimate Get Away

These skiers decide to take a break on the slopes.

Sharing a bed with friends seems big in Haesun Yi's eyes.

Every year when the trees are bare, the temperature has dropped, the wind blows fiercely, and the snow falls, that's the key sign to all skiers that the ski season is coming. It's off to the nearby slopes for these Mt. Vernon students, whether it be Roundtop, Liberty, or Wintergreen. Surely this year you were bound to see someone you knew roaring down one of these slopes.

One ski trip which was on everyone's mind was the excursion to Quebec, Canada with a local ski club. Although this year's trip was planned for the upperclassmen, some underclassman had enough courage to ski with the best, the Seniors.

This out-of-school hobby provided fun filled weekends for many seniors. It provided lots of laughter and good times for everyone.

Caught on the slopes are Shawn Bruns and Jason Knight.

What Would We Do Without It?

Home Away From Home

Our subschool has given us a lot of help for the past four years. It became a focal point for problems, complaints, or just hanging out during classes. Students always knew they could find help and encouragement through any one of the people in the subschool.

Mr. Gordon Hill and Mrs. Mary Jane Thornton kept order and made sure things always ran smoothly in Subschool IV. Our counselors, Mrs. Dorothy Gricher and Mr. Robert Lowe, helped the class excel academically. Since our freshman year, Mrs. Gricher provided a great deal of time and dedication. As an adviser and friend, she provided suggestions and ideas to students.

Always smiling, Mrs. Thornton radiates joy.

Future Choices

Decisions To Be Made

The toughest part of our senior year was the process of deciding what we wanted to do in the future: go to college or stay home and work. The greatest helps we had were Mrs. Van Metre in the Career Center and our counselors.

The Career Center was full of helpful information and brochures. It provided a place for students to research their college choices and to listen to representatives. Our counselors kept us working to meet our application deadlines and helped us to keep our hopes alive.

The first major obstacle in applying to college was deciding on a few schools that would suit our personal needs. Once this decision had been made the college visits began. We talked to students and generally just got a taste of college life. The months passed in which we completed and mailed in our applications, and waited anxiously for acceptance letters. When the letters finally arrived, we relaxed for the rest of the year.

Happy together are Angie Dornbush and Pam Brigham.

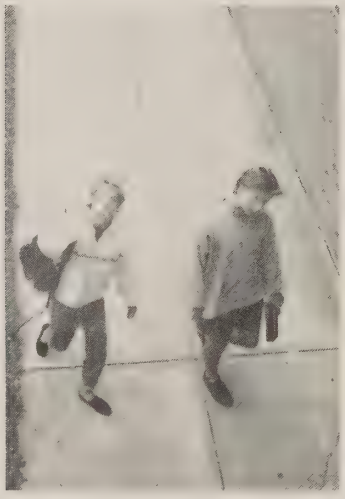
Try to imagine life without friends and how empty the world would be; words like "care", "depend", and "love" rarely would be spoken and the world would be a much darker place.

Happily, however most of us don't know this world. Friends have molded and shaped our lives, practically making us what we are today. We've all shared the laughter, secrets, memories, and tears with our friends and have grown to depend on each other in times of need. Over the course of four years memories have been made, both good and bad, to be stored away in the corners of our minds, retrieving them when necessary. "Friends are a vital part of youth today." commented Rick Thomas.

Friendships have made life a little easier; they have been our stepping stones through it all. They've been by our sides during our best and worst moments, looking past our idiosynchrasies and finding the good in us.



"Late again," think Danny Bush and Mike Kubasciewicz.

Through thick and thin, Kelli Webb and Dana Hensley stick together.

Members of the Bio II class share good times together in Delaware.

Juniors Wendy Hendrick and Derek Kovascy cut a serious rug at this year's annual Homecoming dance.

Enthralled with the subject of chemistry, Doug Menz and Doug Anderson can't help but smile over the thought of ions.

Cheerleader Suzanne Cook throws the crowd into a wild, untamable frenzy at one of the home basketball games.

Juniors

His concentration deteriorating rapidly, Richard Jacobs finds comfort in the palm of his hand, while Richard Baugh looks ahead and diligently listens to the lecture.

This year's junior class started the year off with a bang by charging in on the Homecoming scene and dominating most events, leaving the rest of the school in their victorious wake.

On a more academic note, the class of '90 began to feel and understand the pressures of high school as they struggled through more difficult courses. The reality of the SAT and college rose into their perspective, and juniors buckled down and defined their terms to ready themselves for their last year in high school. Experience and maturity paved the path for the class of '90 as they stepped into the world of upperclassmen.

Rockin' Around The Clock

This year's theme of Homecoming '88 was "A Sign of the Times," incorporating the fifty year anniversary of the school. Preparation for the big event required a great deal of time and hard work. The juniors started the activities off by coming in first in the wall-hanging competition. Their locker decorations , also awarded a first place, turned the junior locker banks and Sub-school III into the M.V. Diner of the fifties. They continued on capturing a victory with their "Major Diner" skit, reliving the fifties with greasers and drag races. Even counselor Mr. Gary Jones, sub-school principal, Ms. Helena Bratten, and class sponsor Mrs. Sharon Nagelhaut participated as M.V. Diner employees in the class skit. The class float took a second only to the senior class. The rainy weather threatened Homecoming plans, but all turned out well on the delayed Saturday night game. The junior class took on the big responsibility of Homecoming '88 with stlye and grace and definitely made it, a Homecoming to remember.

Sitting at the Top

Because of their uniqueness, ability to organize and manage the class, these students were elected for junior class officers this year. The officers were President Carol McCormack, Vice President Jenny Wee, and as class Secretary/Treasurer Bonnie Williamson. Eric Johnson, Mary Jacobi and Doug Anderson served as senators. The main purpose of the senators was to attend the SGA meetings and bring out concerns from the class.

President Carol McCormack put many tough hours into her job. Two successful tasks were Homecoming and Prom. She spent many hours with candy sales, skits, and many other problems. When asked about being an officer, Doug Anderson said, "Being a class officer was a worthwhile experience." He also said," With all the meetings and jobs you have to attend to, you start to learn a lot about being with people."

Serving as junior class officers, Carol McCormack, Jenny Wee, Mary Jacobi, Eric Johnson, and Doug Anderson, take a break from all of their responsibilities.

EXCUSES, EXCUSES, EXCUSES

"My mom will call. Well I guess she's not home at the moment and I'm not sure when she's coming home. My dad? He's out of town for a few days. He didn't even leave me a number where I could reach him."

Excuses, excuses. Skipping class or school is sometimes fun. Most students would do it if they could easily get away with it, and others just do it anyway. Mr. Scott has caught many students either going out to lunch or leaving too early and he said that the most common excuses were I forgot my pass or I forgot my books out in the car.

In-house is another word for the school jail. People who have too many tardies, or people who skip school will probably get a day of in-house. Some people like in-house for a day, but only for a day. Sometimes you can get away with a few hours of sleep. Inhouse has gotten more strict over the years.

Excuses, forgery and fake parental phone calls are all fraud. But a day in the sun or a day with your friends is sometimes good enough for a day of in-house.

It's Monday Again

Your alarm goes off. You hit the snooze bar, then you hit it again one more time, and you still aren't ready to get up. Think of all the terrible things you will have to face: weekend homework never done, teachers who want that homework, nothing to wear. What could possibly be worse then a Monday morning?

Monday is the day that everyone hates to think about. It is a sign that you have an entire week of school before the weekend comes around again. Teachers and students are both tired from the activities of the past few days and nights, and are not altogether ready to work yet. Though nobody lives for Mondays, they are a fact of life that we all learn to deal with, sleepily.

Yet another early Monday morning searching for homework confronts Danette Taft.

Life Get's Harder

The carefree days of the sophomore year were over and the long hard days of the junior year had come. Juniors were hit with a heavy workload filled with many hours at the library doing homework. The juniors realized the work they would have to accomplish to assure future goals, whether they were college-bound or not.

Most juniors planning on a college education signed up for the PSAT's given in late October. The results of the test were returned just before Christmas. Along with the results came the realization that there was life after high school. The junior class was aware of the work ahead of them, and found out that the junior year really is the hardest.

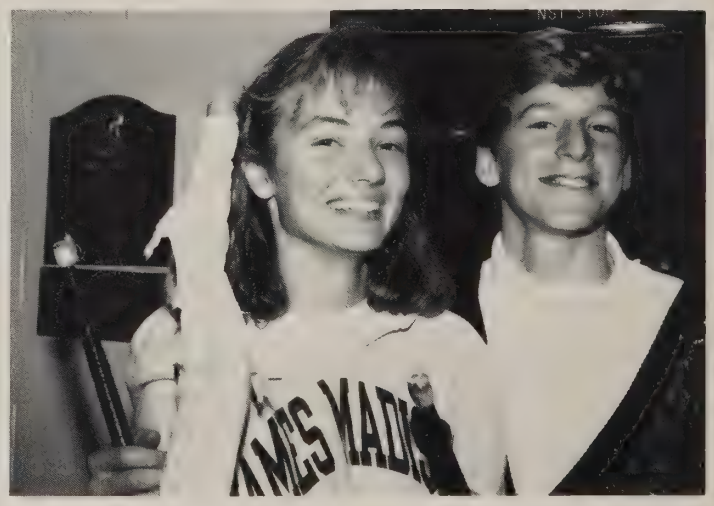
Me and My Buddy

Best friends are hard to come by. One of the few things that stay with you through the years of high school and even after that are your best friends. Everyone has that one person who sticks with them through thick and thin no matter what the consequences could turn out to be. The junior year is especially a time when a good friend is needed the most. With future plans of college or other jobs to prepare for, the pressure can really get to students. Many times that friend knows the right thing to say to help with a problem.

Most students needed, wanted, and found a lasting friendship here that will not be forgotten soon. These relationships were not always male/female relationships, but also groups of friends that had grown together over the years of school. Friends experienced together the new feelings of independence that came with maturity. Although friends will end up going their different ways, the memories of the friendships will last forever.



So happy to be together, Allison Beerthuis and Kyle Beggan just love to spend their time after school flirting with each other.

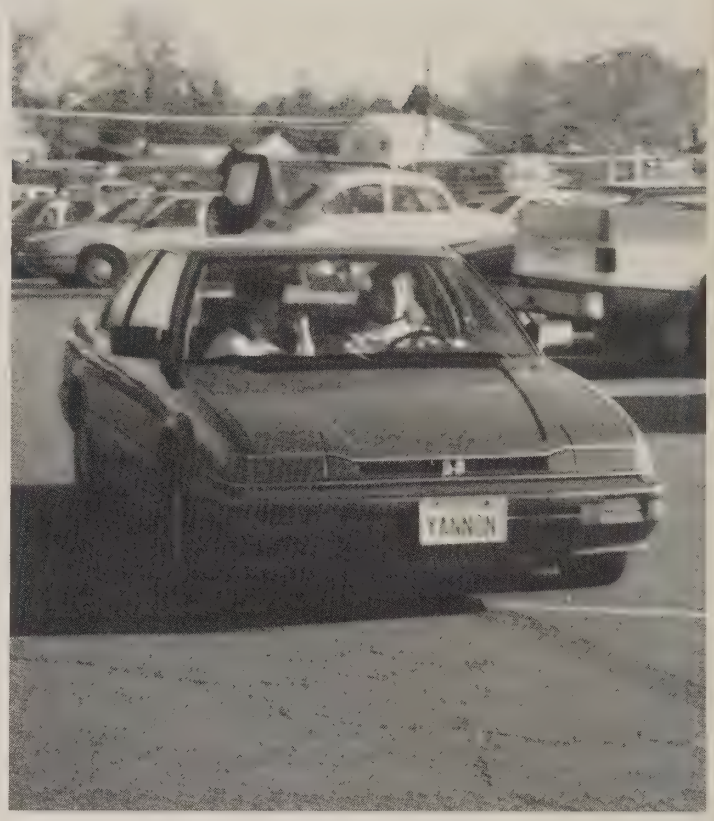
Let's Cruise

A big advantage most students experience their junior year is when they can finally drive. Driving meant that students can stop asking parents for a ride to school, practice, or where ever else they needed to be. All of a sudden, juniors had freedom to just grab their keys and cruise the streets with their friends. With no worries of transporation, the only limit was the gas tank.

It started in the classroom with Mr. Slack, watching movies and reading books about defensive driving. Behind-the-wheel either with the school or taken privately, was the next step for a license. Finally a trip to D.M.V. could be taken to get that little plastic card with the bad picture. Now the only challenge left was to get the keys from Mom and Dad.

A few lucky people were given cars to drive whenever they wanted. There were Mark Gagan with his sporty new Wrangler Jeep and Wendy Chesser with her '89 Celica to drive around. The majority of the class, however, ended spending hours begging for the car over the weekend or to drive to school.



With her personalized license plate "YANNON," Shannon Scott speeds out of the school parking lot as fast as she can.

Friday's Aren't Forever

The weekend activities for Juniors this year ranged from studying for that big exam on Monday to partying with friends. The academic pressures were much greater and this called for many long hours at the library and at home slaving over piles of books. Sometimes it seemed as if there were not a weekend at all, simply seven straight days of school.

The year wasn't all studying however; the juniors often found time to go out and have fun. Going to games, movies, or parties with friends were frequent events for juniors. The time away from school was probably as valuable as the time in was. Getting to know friends better and just having time to relax proved to be the greatest asset of the weekends.

Life would have been much more stressful and monotonous without the weekend breaks. Without weekends, high school life would never be the same. The time off was a necessity and many weekends will never be forgotten.

Drained from the hard week of exams and homework, Sarah Hoyt can't wait for this weekend's parties and social events.

Expressions of the Class of '90

Faces In the Crowd

Everyday the students' lives were filled with different forms of expression: verbal, written, and facial. These expressions served as an outlet for all of their many emotions. Anyone could tell the way a person was feeling just by the look on his face. A frown could mean anything from a failed test to a lack of plans for the weekend.

Facial expressions were often used, but other emotions such as love and friendship were apparent in actions as well. The way eyes met and hands were held often told how people really felt.

Grabbing a quick nap by his locker, Rob Travis relaxes after school.

The media center seems to be one of Steve Mathias's favorite hang -outs.

So excited by the game, Amy Bassilly can't hold back a smile.

At a football game, Justine Rhodes searches for the rest of her friends to make plans.

Mac McFeely shines his weekend smile after deciding on his exciting Friday night plans.

Sophomores

In Mr. Ingall's English class, Tania Taylor and Earle Ady become quite intrigued by the novels they're reading as an independent project.

The second year students this year, a.k.a. the "sophomores", were surely happy to begin the year one step ahead of their rank last year as "freshmen." They had a chance to step ahead and show the upperclassmen what they were all about.

With a successful homecoming, the sophomores prepared for the upcoming year. Academically, they showed tremendous ability with the high number of students on the honor roll each quarter. In testing, the sophomores got a taste of the college boards by taking the PSAT.

To prepare for the future years, the sophomores had a prosperous candy sale and also sold carnations for Valentine's Day.

The Elite

The sohomores demonstrated to us all that they were spirited and enthusiastic. The powerful leadership team made up of President Julie Mullen, Vice President Thurlow Stenson, Secretary/Treasurer Adam Gerloff, and Senators Jason Endicott, Aisha Johnson, and Woody Lewis provided the excellence that made the sophomore class one of the strongest in the school.

"Working with our group of officers was very successful; we are all such good friends. We really work well together," said Julie Mullen. Homecoming demonstrated this teamwork.

The class of '91 definitely helped the sun shine in the halls of M.V. High.

Laughing over their Homecoming skit, Woody Lewis and Aisha Johnson remember the era of the forties, when Pinocchio was first published.

The sophomore SGA officers show their togetherness, a quality that helped them to succeed throughout the year.

Sophmores Kickin'

The sophomore class reflected the era of the forties. Their homecoming activities were all based on the events during that particular decade. The story of Pinocchio was their theme.

For a second straight year the class of '91's enthusiam and class spirit contributed to a successful Homecoming. Although their Homecoming was not victorious, the class showed signs of dedication that will pay off in the future.

"Homecoming was so much fun ," said Courtney Young. "We really put a lot into it and I think everyone got a lot out of it."

Lunch Time!!!

Conserving space in the over crowed "A-lunch", Karen Manzo and Jason Swanson make the best of a tough situation.

Although school lunches do not compare to the food at Chadwicks, students always look foward to fourth period. As the sophomores faced greater academic pressures, the thirty-two minutes became a time to forget about school and relax with friends. "When you are with friends, the food is not really that bad. Sometimes there is good stuff, like taco salad and the juice machine," reported sophomore Adam Gerloff.

Most sophomores were scheduled for "A-lunch" and did not mind because the majority of their friends were there. Because of the schedule conflicts, some sophomores ate with the upper classmen in "B-lunch". Although most students preferred to eat during this time, other students used this as a study period. When asked how he liked the later lunch, sophomore Paul Domalavage said "I think it's great having a later lunch!" Bon Appetit!

Wise Fools

In the American Heritage Dictionary the word sophomore is shown to be derived from the Greek words "sophos" meaning wise and "moros" meaning foolish. These second year students were introduced to many new academic and extracurricular activities. With these new responsibilities came many long hours of hard work and pressure.

We stopped these "wise fools" and asked them, "What does being a sophomore mean to you?" A varied group of responses was given.

"I'm glad that I am a sophomore, because I'm not a frosh anymore and I'm not doing college applications," says Jamie Scott.

"I'd rather be home watching soap operas than be in fourth period P.E." John Harris states, "I'm not to crazy about being a sophomore."

"I love being a sophomore; it's so much fun," says Karen Manzo. "I really enjoyed this year, it was awesome!"

"I'm just here to have fun; I could care less about what you label me as," states Courtney Lewis.

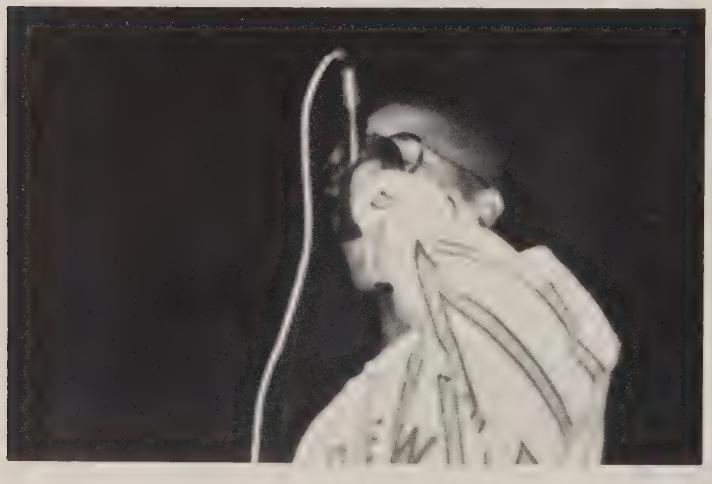
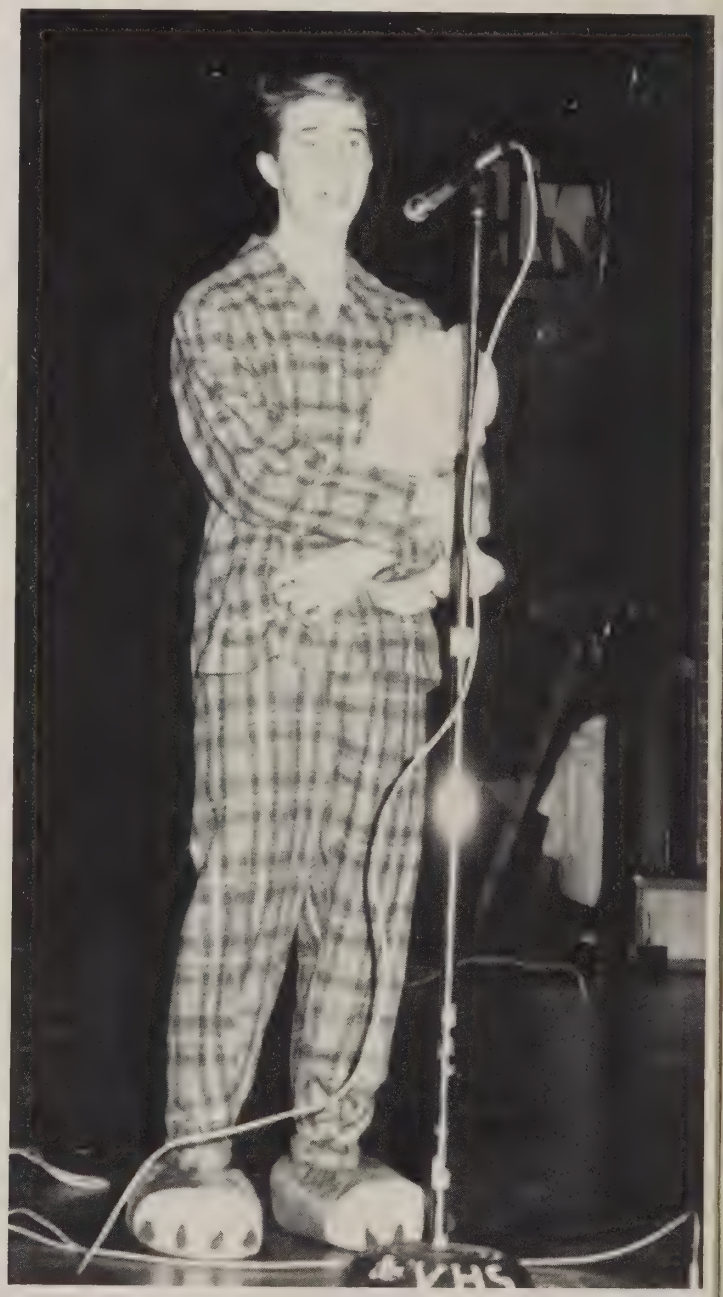
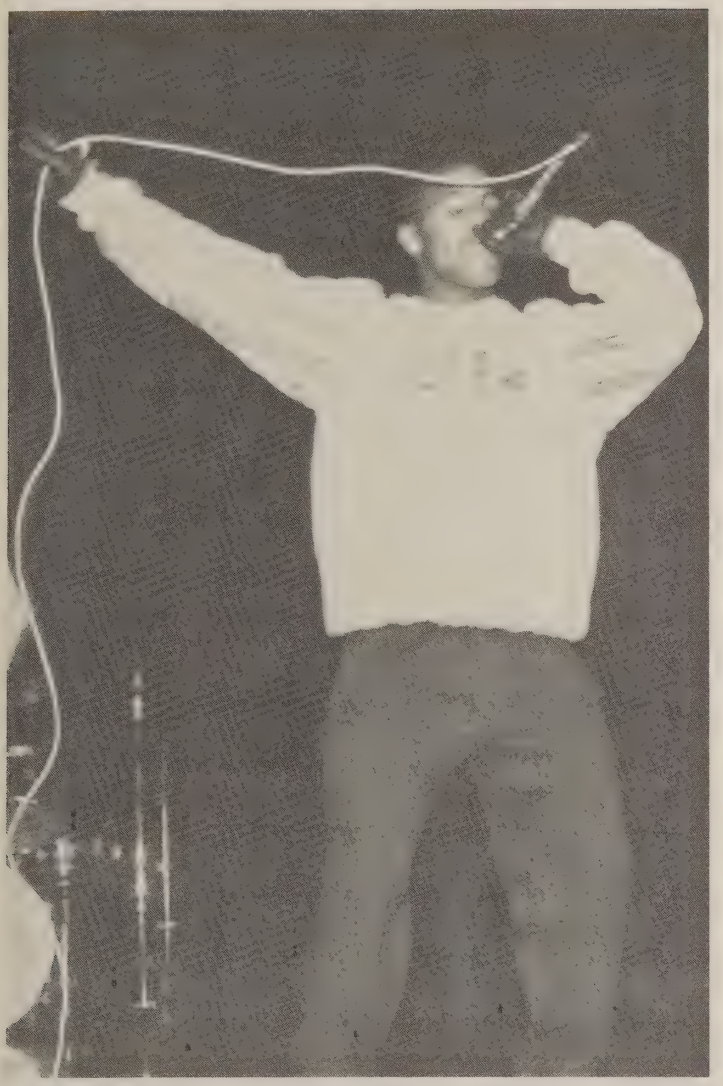
Stunned and amazed by Chad's striptease act, sophomores Adam Gerloff and David Nichols sit still in stunned silence as they try to gasp for air.



Leading the crowd and rocking to the beat, Damian Boggan shows his stuff while belting out a popular hit song.



Standing in front of the microphone, Chad Marsh needs the security of his teddy bear to show everyone the true informal image of himself.



"It's My Perogative," sings Damian as he hits another high note during the all important talent phase of Mr. Mount Vernon.

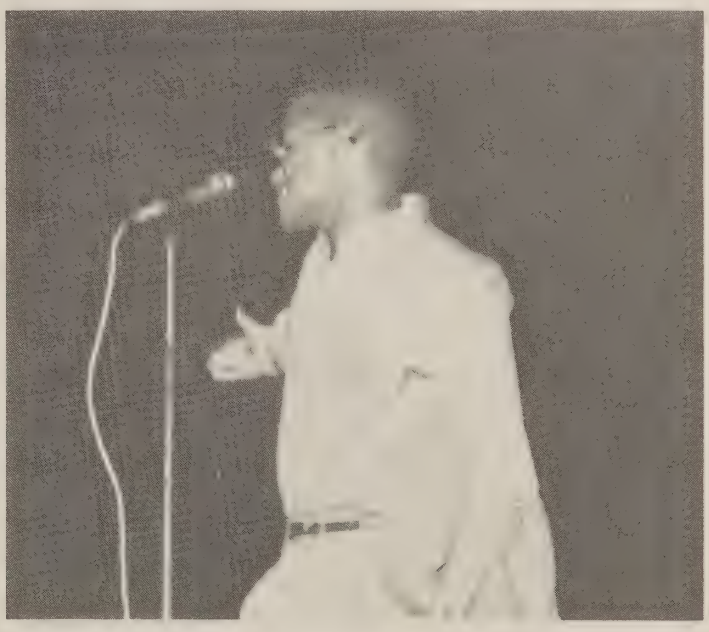
Strut and Strip

Even though they didn't win, the Class of '91 knew who their Mr. Mount Vernons really were. Showing their true talents, both sophomores left the crowd restless. Leaving all the girls breathless, sophomore Chad Marsh revealed more than his handsome smile. Damian Boggan made people dance in their seats while proving what was his prerogative.

Asked if he would do it again, Chad Marsh said, "There is no doubt in my mind. It was a lot of fun and it's not something everyone gets to do." This was definitely a time to remember.

Showing off his sexy, Tom Cruise smile and pinstrip suit, Chad glides across the stage leaving all the girls breathless.

Reaching his final layer and looking for a way out, Chad Marsh thinks of his mother who suggested this for his talent.



With full confidence, Damian answers the question, "just take a look at me."

SUCCESS!

"Success to me means feeling proud about yourself and feeling that you've gained the respect of your peers," said Jason Swanson. No doubt Jason's high school experience has been successful; his record proved it. Jason excelled in academics, extracurricular activities, and sports.

During his sophomore year Jason faced a rigorous academic schedule. In addition to the normal sophomore subjects, Jason took GT English, GT Algebra II-/Trig, and AP Spanish III, generally considered an upperclass course. Even with such challenging classes, he maintained a 3.5 grade point average.

Involvement in activities also took time. He was a member of the National Honor Society and the Spanish Honor Society. Chemistry Club and FBLA were also clubs to which he contributed his time and hard work. However, Jason took a special interest in the Key Club. As a member of the club's Board of Directors, Jason said, " I really enjoy doing projects that help make my community better, and that's what the Key Club does."

Aside from academics and activities, Jason has always made room for sports. His freshman year he played football and JV soccer. Varsity soccer was this year's goal.

Although Jason has always set his goals high, his positive attitude and determination have allowed him to reach them.

Wheel Mobility

For many sophomores this was the year they turned sixteen and took Driver's Ed with Mr Randy Slack. Most sophomores didn't seem to mind taking this class which served as a preliminary step to receiving a licence. The class according to Jason Endicott was "gnarly." This course emphasized the importance of wearing your seat belt; by watching films that showed the mangled bodies of those who failed to buckle up, students learned the message quickly.

Most sophomores did not look forward to Behind the Wheel, a course designed to teach the inexperienced driver how to handle a car. Cyndi Miner summed it up by saying, "It was the most demeaning and boring 13 hours I've ever lived."

The final, difficult moment arrived when the hopeful driver faced the written exam and the road test. If he passed both tests, the DMV issued the eager sixteen year-old his license. Pedestrians beware!

Soph Power

In addition to new academic responsiblities, sophomores were thrown into a new world in athletics: the world of Junior Varsity. Sophomores participating in sports mostly played on the JV teams; JV football, JV basketball, and JV cheerleading were all dominated by sophomores.

New expectations forced sophomore JV'ers to go that extra mile, but in the end it paid off with successful football and basketball seasons. JV football player Jeff Beck summarized, "I wasn't a freshman anymore. People expected more of me and I gave it to them."

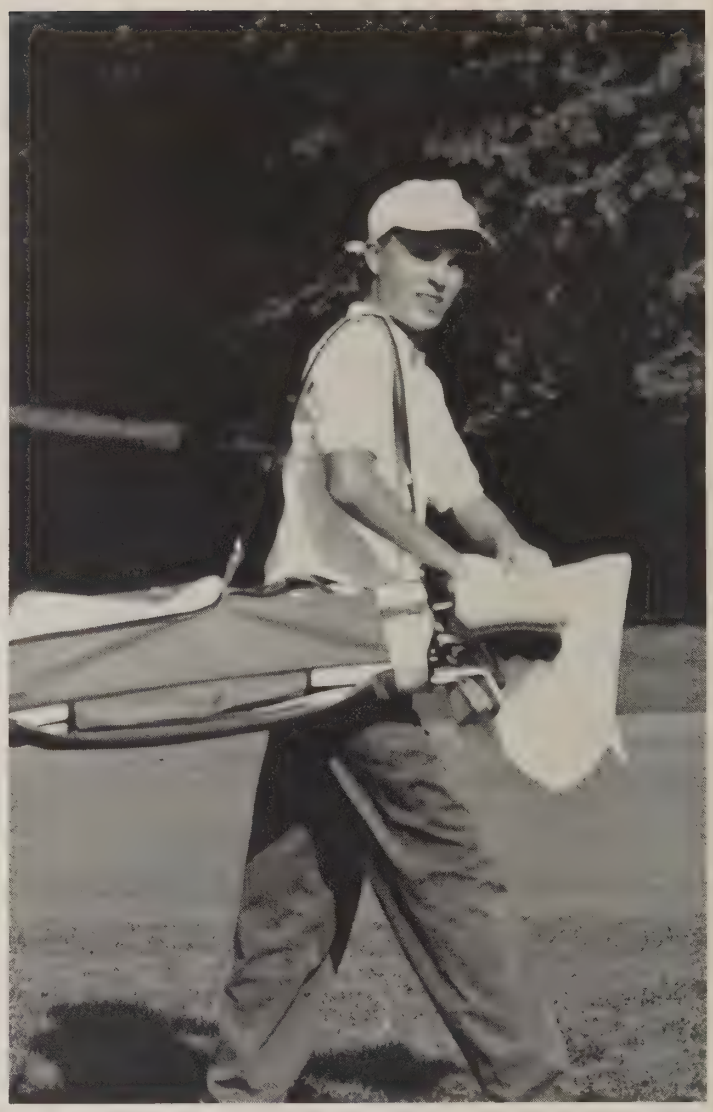
True Spirits of 91'

Everyone knows that coming to a new school and adjusting to new teachers, students, and classes is a hard change, but it didn't take long for the Class of 91' to join right in here at Mount Vernon. This class really showed their spirit by joining all the clubs, athletic teams, and other in and out of school activities Mount Vernon had to offer.

The sophomore class really showed their school spirit during the Homecoming activities. Although they didn't win, class unity was evident in their float and skit.

Enjoying their candy, lolly-pop twins April Logan and Lynne Mitchell help cheer on the JV football team on a cold, misty night.



Walking tall and showing off his professional qualities, Chad Blair, carries his clubs to the next hole during a critical tournament.

Mad scientist, Heather Starkey, creates a new specimen that might just save the world in Mrs. Mary Ann Jefferson's biology lab.

During a class meeting, the sophomore cheerleaders show that they've got the spirit it takes to conquer all.

Thirsty from hard work, David Firkin stops at the water fountain.

With a big grin, Imem Sawez studies the dictionary to enlarge his vocabulary as preparation for next year's SATs.

Surprised by the camera on the media center stairs, Wendy Wosoogh stops and strikes a pose on her way to class.

Wistfully watching the movie, Nicholas Short and Anthony Ciuca wish that they could be in "fair Verona" with Juliet.

Demonstrating friendship that will last all four years, Michelle Weigel and Karen Holbrook hang on for dear life.

As they head to class, Rita Reed and Fotima Mimikos take a moment to stop at their locker to discuss their homework.

Freshmen

Clutching their school maps, Lisa Lawler, Julie Locke, Lisa Marzetti, Dana McClellan, and Katie Van Valin hurry to class on the first day to make a good impression.

As the new edition to our school, these freshmen turned out "o.k." From the first day of school to the end of the year, the freshmen showed real promise for a sucessful future at Mount Vernon.

Most teachers wondered what the new class would be like in the classroom. Their doubts were surely turned into hopes as the freshmen had the most number of students on the honor roll more then once.

From a counselor's point of view, Mr. Carl Schloemer shared that,"the change from seniors to freshmen is from relative maturity to immaturity, but I really enjoy watching my kids grow up and become mature."

These "baby majors" caught on quickly to the spirit and enthusiasm of the organizations to which they gave their spare time.

The Big Day

What a day it was. Mount Vernon started out its 50th anniversary with a freshman bang. The enthusiasm the freshmen brought with them gave the "sheriff," Mr. John Nottingham, a joyful spirit. As the freshmen came in, smiling faces appeared and the students' main thought was "I'm finally grown up."

The intention of the orientation was to introduce students to Mount Vernon and to show them around to the proud halls of Mount Vernon High. The freshmen learned that day what it was like to be a part of the awaited world of high school, and what it meant to have responsibility.

For many, those first few moments of being in a new place were extremely frightening. The new students held their heads high so no one would see how they really felt.

By having a chance to see the school in an unhurried pace and having the opportunity to meet their teachers, these students found themselves better prepared to face the challange of the first REAL day of school.

The new freshmen listen attentively during their first lecture given by principal John Nottingham.

The freshman cheerleaders show off their "stuff" with their fancy footwork.

As Mr. Nottingham gives his first lecture, he explains to the freshman how things are done at M.V.

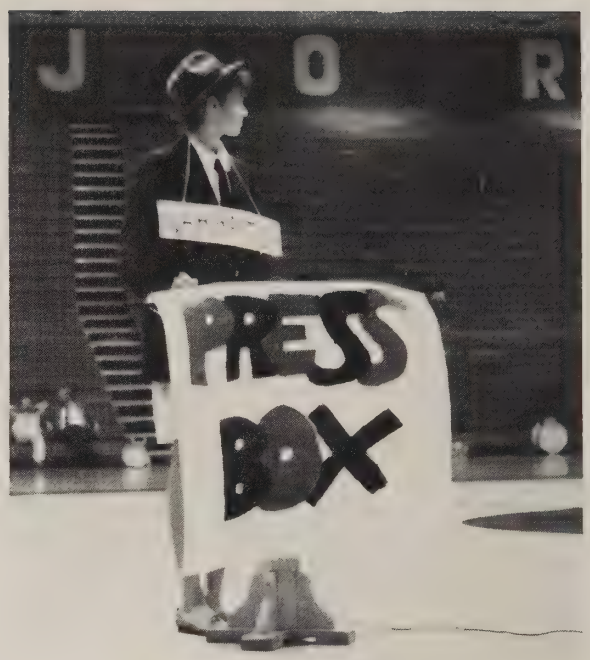
A Sign of the Time

For the freshmen, Homecoming became a special event. They found many new pressures on them, not only because this was their first year in high school, but it was also the 50th anniversary. The freshmen showed their efforts and their spirit with their wallhanging, locker decorations, skit, and finally their float, all with a 50's theme.

The homecoming dance provided freshmen with their first opportunity to get dressed up and experience high school social life.

Jenel Pavel said, "It was an experience that I will never forget." Many others said that they felt the same way, not just about the dance, but all the memorable events. Most students interviewed said that " if this is high school life, the next three years wouldn't be too bad." They also felt that next year they will be the class to win most, if not all, the awards.

Together the freshmen proved that they had talents that would be greatly appreciated in the future.



The narrator, Jesette Oder, tells the story about how the A-Lee-ns stole the Majors quarterback, and how he was rescued.

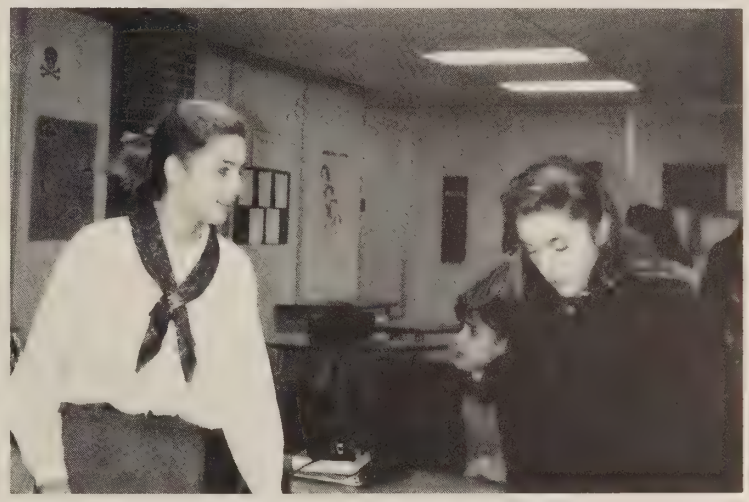
The Leaders

It's a jungle out there and who knew it better than the freshman class of '92. High School proved to be a frightful place to go for the first time if there was no one there to lead your way. This was what the freshmen class officers were elected to do.

As their principle leaders there were president Shannon Bilbray, vice president Sarah Gaskin, secretary Donna Goodwin, and the senators Megan Fletcher, Lou Golden, and Christine Valley. These young people were chosen because their fellow peers believed they would be leading them to a year of success.

All the officers contributed to the activities of the year, especially homecoming, with all of their dedication, preparation, and participation. Throughout the year, they proved that they were a great combination.

With their efforts and a spirited freshman class behind them, the frosh worked their way to the top with pride and showed that they had the "right stuff" to make it through their first golden year.



Pausing for a few minutes before geometry begins, Christine Valley takes a few minutes out of her time to talk with Lisa Lawler about Homecoming.

Special People

Friends are nice to have around; they help throughout the good and bad times. The freshmen knew best how important it was to have someone next to you when things started to get tough.

It was nice to have a friend next to you when you felt like the smallest one at the party or in an upperclassmen class. It was great to have someone listen to all the gossip and good news you had to tell. It was always a big help if you had a friend there to help you out with that unbearable homework load that you had to take home every night.

The best thing though about having a friend was when you really needed someone to talk to or just needed a shoulder to cry on. The good times and the bad times--that's what friends are for.

The Superstar

When you thought of a potential superstar, one name in the freshman class came to mind, Cheri Yadao. Cheri made a name for herself even before she came to high school. She started off by being a diver for Mansion House diving team, where she learned much that she needed to know to become a major contribution to the Mount Vernon diving team.

Diving was not her only attribute; Cheri's excellent skills as a field hockey player earned her the position of captain on the J.V. team.

In addition to athletics, Cheri maintained a B+ average and was enrolled in advanced classes that required her to spend a great deal of time studying.

When asked what she wanted to do with her life, she replied, "I hope to go to Stanford College and would like to secure a spot on the Olympic diving team." She definitly has what it takes to be a star: determination, intelligence, and athletic ability.

At a home football game, Heather White shows her school spirit and enthusiasm by cheering for the Majors as they go for the win.

Digesting a book for lunch, Cheri Yadao does last night's homework, which is more important to her system than her daily lunch.

For the first time in front of an audience, the freshman cheerleaders show just how great they really are together.

Glamorous Touch

Who's the coolest guy in the school? That's what the Mr. Mount Vernon contest attempted to discover. Kelly Starrett and Jason Carroll proved that they were daring enough to represent the freshman class.

Kelly Starrett started off by showing the casual look with the German style complete with lederhosen and Tyrolean hat while Jason Carroll chose a more traditional school look of jeans and running shoes.

When the time came to answer the important questions, Kelly's question was, "Who influenced your life the most and why?" He thought for a moment and responded, "My parent's look at the way I'm dressed." Jason's question was, "What song best describes you?" He answered, "Simply Irrisistable."

During the talent phase, both freshmen showed the future they have as advertising salesmen in midnight television commercials. Kelly demonstrated the Bass-o-Matic, which blended up a bass into a drink that Jason pretended to drink. Jason expounded on the features of the Leaf-o-Matic, which blended up leaves that Kelly actually ate with ice cream.

Kelly showed the formal look by dressing snazzy, which made the girls gasp. Jason, in his formal clothes, also drew sighs from the crowd.

Strutting his stuff during Mr. Mt Vernon, Jason Carroll walks the stage showing the formal look that suits him just fine.

"First you take a really fresh bass," says Kelly Starrett as he explains the use of the Bass-O-Matic during the Mr. Mt. Vernon competition.

Carrying a walking stick adds class to Jason's casual jean look.

Confident with his alpine attire, Kelly saunters across the stage.

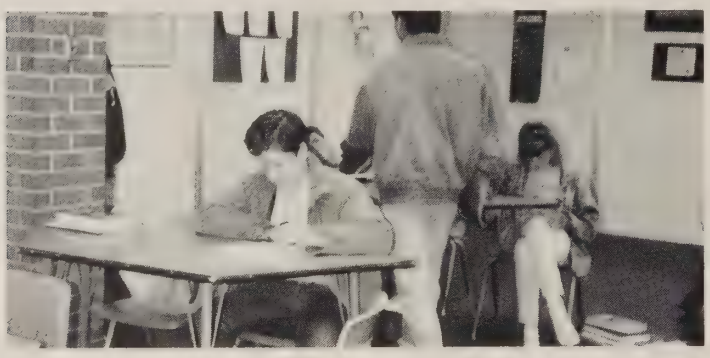
Serious Time

Being freshman, not too many kids worried about the main things about high school. The books, homework, studying, and grades were the last things that came to these students' minds. Towards the middle of the year, after the parents, counselors, and the teachers harped and complained for 18 weeks about how important they all were, the students started to realize high school was not all fun and games, and that they did have to do some work to pass their classes. That's when the freshmen settled down and started to get serious.

This being their first year in high school, many people were not used to having so much work to do; but they had to adjust, and eventually most of them did. This was the first big step they took to a future career.

Looking over the homework from last night, Scott Lelacheur gets ready for the teacher's lesson.



Getting a laugh off of the worksheets, Julie Lock and Lisa Marzetti do their geometry.

Home Sweet Home

Just a few last minute things need to be picked up, such as last night's homework, before Michael Doxy can be ready enough to go to class.

For many freshman students' lockers were considered a home away from home. This was the first year they were really able to experience the convienence of having their space for any practical use. There were many uses given to that little crawl space; many people used the lockers to store things. Clothes, pictures, posters, food, and every now and then a book would find their way in there.

Some freshmen were afraid of being shoved into these small lockers by the upper classmen. Most freshmen took advantage of the mornings and afternoons in the locker bank to talk with friends and most importantly to plan the weekend's activities.

Even in the gym locker room, lockers come in handy to store Uyen Le's books and clothes while in gym and her gym suit fits in nicely over night.

Just Freshmen

The freshman year of high school was always an interesting and different experience, and everyone faced it differently. Some students, the teachers' pets, went face first into the work and enjoyed all the rewards that came with it.

Others, the normal people, tip-toed into the year and had lots of fun yet really didn't get enough accomplished to make the teachers happy, but they did manage to do some of the boring homework.

Finally, there were the ones who thought the freshman year meant very little on future college applications; these students just had fun and did no work.

These students combined to make up a unique freshman class.

Faculty

History teacher, Mr. Timothy Kerlin chuckles quietly to himself in total disbelief as he quickly scans through his classes' tests on the Constitution of the United States.

Looking at the heart of Mount Vernon, it was impossible to see anything else but the faculty members—teachers, principals, administrators, counselors, secretaries and countless others. Together as a team, these individuals strived to form a more positive environment where the students could come to learn and grow into more mature and responsible young adults. As we grew into maturity, we as students realized that the faculty members were more than just our teachers or disiplinarians; they were friends and people whom we grew to admire and respect.

The Top Notch

The administrators of Mount Vernon functioned as the backbone of our school. From the principal Dr. Paula Johnson to the subschool staffs, they all helped make our everyday lives smoother.

Subschool staffs gave us the keys to success. The secretaries organized each day to perfection and gave students the help they needed. The counselors in each subschool lent a helping hand when needed and gave us their best advice.

Last but not least, the principals worked hard to help guide and discipline us when needed. They also showed that they were really "human" when they willingly participated in Homecoming skits and other "less than dignified" student fun.

With the guiding hands of our valuable administration, the student body of Mount Vernon functioned smoothly and efficiently. However, when the rocky times occasionally did come around, they helped us overcome the obstacles and steered us in the right direction.

In one of their more serious moods, principal Dr. Paula Johnson and Subschool IV principal Mr. Gordon Hill confer.

Worldly Teaching

Mrs. Eleanor Landgrabe has taken a group of her students on a cultural experience each year since 1974. For 15 years she has taken groups of five to twenty-eight students to many different countries.

This year was a special year for Mrs. Landgrabe; instead of being a counselor, she was a courier. As a courier she was in charge of the whole trip. She made all the arrangements from plane tickets to meal plans. This is a rare and special honor for counselors, especially for Mrs. Landgrabe who received this honor for being named by her company as one of the ten most outstanding counselors in the U.S. Mrs. Landgrabe summed it all up in saying, "There's no better form of education than travel."

Many other teachers, including Mrs. Connie Goodwin, Mrs. Rocio Edmundson, Mrs. Delores Amico, and Mrs. Jeannie Schelleng, have taken student groups abroad to such far flung places as Spain, Pompeii, and Tunisia.

On the plane ride home, Mrs. Eleanor Landgrade relaxes after taking a group of students on a beautiful and hectic tour of Europe.

After Hours

A teacher's life didn't end with the ringing of the 2:05 bell as Mrs. Gayle Deaton, Mr. Brian Taylor, and Ms. Donelle Oxley, as well as many others, proved.

As coach of all of the cheerleading squads, Mrs. Deaton spent many hours helping the girls learn new routines and supervising them at football, basketball, wrestling, and cheerleading competitions.

After finishing his "job" as a P.E. teacher, Mr. Taylor not only coached the wrestling squads, but also announced all of the home football games.

Ms. Oxley gave of her time by greeting students at 8:00 a.m., making sure they had two #2 pencils, and procter-ing the S.A.T. tests on numerous Saturday mornings.

As the basketball cheerleaders perform during a home game against Lee, Mrs. Gayle Deaton watches "her girls" with a critical eye.

Teachers' Choice

Chosen by her fellow faculty members as Mount Vernon's candidate for the Agnes Meyer Teacher of the Year Award, given annually by the Washington Post to the outstanding teacher in the Metropolitan Washington area, Mrs. Sharon Naglehout was recognized for both her excellence in teaching and her sincere desire to assist teens with their problems.

In addition to teaching a variety of Home Ec. classes, Mrs. Naglehout recently initiated the Peer Counseling course which covered a wide spectrum of topics ranging from alcohol and drug abuse to sensitivity to the needs of others. "'Kids Helping Kids' is a valuable resource that we must use and expand at MV," said Mrs. Naglehout.

As part of a three day seminar on the effects of drug and alcohol use on teen lives which was given during the Peer Counseling class, Quineice Wellington, Robin Harris, Craig Dell, Amy Bassily, and Mrs. Nagelhout discuss some of the points raised by Carla Watson, a speaker from the Fairfax County Substance Abuse Program.

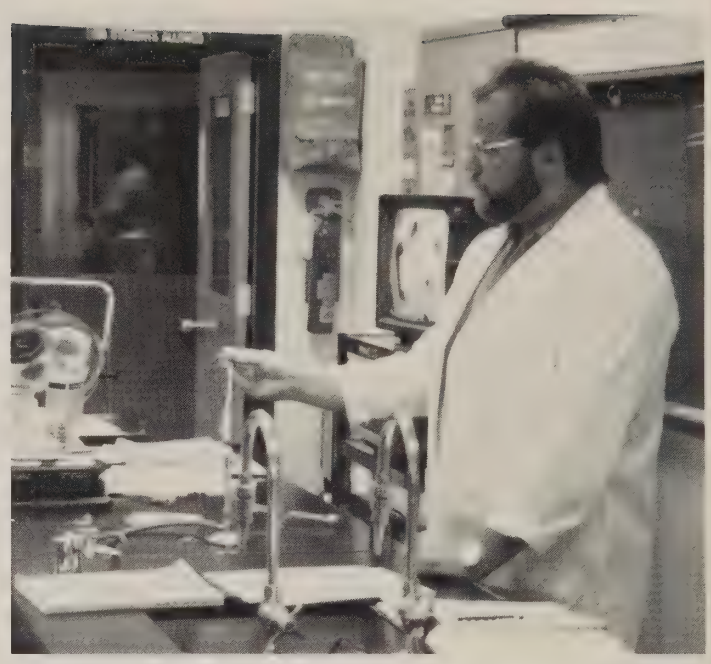
Science of Marriage

Chemistry appeared to dominate the science department; two faculty members, Mr. Robert Sanders and Ms. Monica Tonn, relinquished the free and easy single life and decided to get married.

Mr. Sanders, chemistry teacher and varsity soccer coach, married Maureen Miller on April 8. After an exotic honeymoon on Margarita Island in Venezuela, the Sanders took up residence in Alexandria.

Marriage provided difficulties for the students of the second newlywed; up until May 6 students addressed this first year physics and math teacher as Ms. Tonn; but, after the wedding, students had to get used to calling her Mrs. Gicking. She and Robert planned to settle in Chantilly.



Heating a pipette with his Bunsen burner, Mr. Robert Sanders gives a demonstation before the students attempt a difficult chemistry lab.

Surrounded by formulas needed for the day's lesson on Newton, Ms. Monica Tonn/Gicking, checks the roll before beginning her physics class.

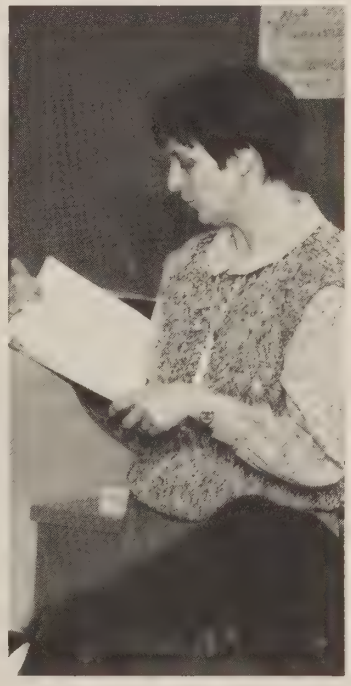
Before she begins to Xerox the materials she needs for next week's reading classes, Dr. Betty Lindholm uses the paper cutter as part of the "cut and paste" technique.



To pique her students' interest, Mrs. Marino reads a paragraph to them.

Always eager to assist students, Mrs. Jeanne Byrd explains the meaning of a difficult vocabulary word to junior Wildad Jean.

As juniors Tia Aiava, Bernard Davis, and Darnell Gatewood write journals about Dr. Martin Luther King, Mr. Pat Freeman keeps a watchful eye.

Concentrating on the court action, Mr. Mike Skinner gets ready to announce another basket for the Majors in a game against the Robinson Rams.

Welcome Back

Since people don't go into teaching for money, it must because they love working with students. Mrs. Jeanne Byrd, Mr. Patrick Freeman, and Mr. Mike Skinner, all former faculty members, proved their love by continuing to work at MV after their retirement.

Last year Mrs. Byrd decided to retire after teaching at MV for nine years and at other county schools before that. Instead of sitting at home, she decided to spend some of her time substitute teaching, but "I only accepted jobs at Mount Vernon," she stated.

Students also did a double take when they heard they had a sub and walked into class and found Mr. Freeman taking roll. Since he retired only last year, many students knew him and found that having a sub wasn't nearly the fun they had hoped for. When asked about how he liked retirement, he replied, "It's great; I'd recommend it to anyone!"

Since he retired from his job as sub-school principal five years ago, Mr. Skinner has remained active in school affairs. During this time, he has been most visible and vocal as the announcer for the boys' basketball home games, a logical extention of his former job as basketball coach.

Busy Fatherhood

A faculty member here for 24 years, Mr. Timothy Kerlin is a popular, well-liked, but somewhat strict history teacher. Two activities kept him very busy outside of school this year.

Although Mr. Kerlin had two children from a previous marriage, a son Paul who graduated from MV in 1985 and a daughter Laurie, he and his second wife Nancy decided to adopt a child so that she could experience the joys of motherhood. They began their quest in September of 1987. "Adoption takes a long, long time," stated Mr. Kerlin.

On September 11, 1988 the Kerlin family received a two day old bouncing baby girl from South Carolina. They named her Geanette Elizabeth but she's still not officially adopted because of the complicated adoption process. Geanette Elizabeth "brought enjoyment and enrichment into our house," Mr. Kerlin explained. Both Paul and Laurie also love the baby's company.

In spite of the demands of fatherhood, Mr. Kerlin found time to participate in Civil War reenactments in both May and June. Previously, he appeared in four historical movies and he rode in the '81 and '85 inaugural parades.

As a member of Maine 1st Regiment Volunteer Cavalry, Mr. Timothy Kerlin serves as the flag-bearer while he enjoys a favorite hobby, Civil War reenactments.

Obviously extremely proud of his adopted daughter Geanette Elizabeth, Mr. Kerlin demonstrates the joys of fatherhood while she looks at him with rapt attention.

Hidden Assets

Think of the last time your club had a candy sale or other fund-raiser; what happened to all those nickles, dimes, quarters, and dollar bills after you gave them to your club sponsor? Although most students never saw her, MV's finance secretary Mrs. Naomi Jolicoeur, counted, credited, and deposited all the money needed to run the school.

The school budget compared to that of a small business; in addition to the overall school account, each club, sport, and academic department had a separate account with a separate ledger. Somehow, in her cluttered 12'x12' office Mrs. Jolicoeur managed to keep track of over $500,000 of school receipts.

Another "hidden" staff member was Mrs. Mie Oshima, our ADP operator, who entered approximately 10,000 grades into the computer four times a year; were it not for Mrs. Oshima, nobody would have received those wonderful computer printouts that all students so anxiously took home to their parents.

In addition to grades, Mrs. Oshima also prepared the daily attendance sheet, continually up-dated the master list of students and faculty, and printed name labels for a variety of school and club mailings.

At the beginning of the year, Mrs. Oshima plans her monthly schedule.

As only one of many daily transactions, Mrs. Jolicoeur writes a check.

Eager to be of assistance, Mrs. Nancy Van Metre assists senior Jason Knight as he searches for additional college information in the Career Center. He wants to be sure he makes the right choice.

Relaxing from "snagging" skippers, Ms. Debby Sunbery, reads a notice.

Special Support

Few students seem to recognize or appreciate the services that the custodial force and cafeteria staff of Mt. Vernon High provide for them. Junior Ryan Ludwig stated, "I usually don't pay attention, but they sure do seem to be reliable when it comes to keeping the school clean." Without the support staff working hard throughout the day and evening the students of M.V. would have no lights to study under, nor any food to nourish them during the day. They definitely deserve more respect than they receive, for without their effort and determination M.V. wouldn't be the school it is today.

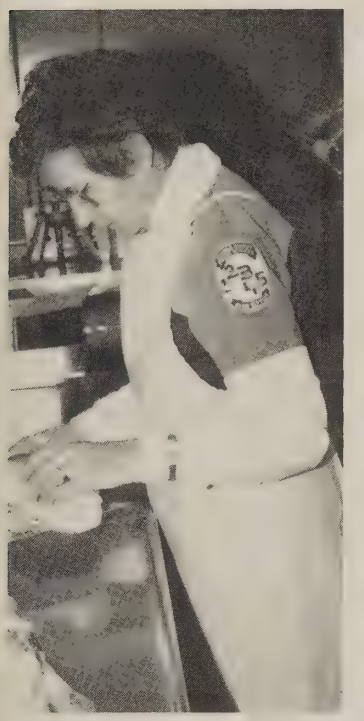
Enjoying his much deserved dinner break is janitor Earl Williams.

"Do you want to install this or should I?," asks custodian Bok Song.

Making the halls of M.V. shine is Tuyen Troung alias "Mr. T".

Building supervisor Joe Piatt delivers some chairs to the drama room.

1st row: Myong Gaj, Bok Song, Soon Young, Myong An, Young Lee, Boo Oh, Tae Kang, Kum Oldknow. 2nd row: Larry Carpenter, Fred Sturgeon, Delbert Linthicum, Bill Hilton, Tuyen Troung, Suk Kwon, Son Kang, Soon Kim, Joe Piatt.



Quickly preparing for today's lunch, Mary Filipovich butters the buns.

Keeping the assembly line moving, Mary Jeanne Douvlos quickly restocks the tray of Big Bite burgers for hundreds of hungry students.

Trying to fulfill the students' nutritional dietary needs, Mae Harris prepares freshly grown vegetables to balance out the meal.

Junior Angie Door gladly receives the chili for her taco salad from Shanta Chada while fellow junior Rachel Yost tries to decide on her choice .

Smiling, senior Doug Cowan steps into the Plantation Flower Shop hoping to find that perfect flower for his girlfiend.

"Mmmmm, I love that Rocky Road," sighs junior Liz Warns as senior Penny Hamrick eyes her Baskin-Robbins sundae.

Everyone has beauty secrets. Senior Karen Kahlich reveals hers, a cut and style at Vincent of Pear Tree Salon.

Advertising/Index

These two seniors, Aurelia Addison and Brooks Richardson, try to decide between pepperoni, anchovies, and sausage as the topping for their Domino's pizza.

Like every year, the student body's social life extended outside of school: friends met off campus after school and on weekends, students were spotted at the movies, restaurants and countless malls in the area. The businesses around Mount Vernon supplied students with fashion, food, and fun. We used these places as meeting spots, to find friends and spend our money. These businesses have supported Mount Vernon and its student body for a number of years, donating money and funds to many of the student organizations. We as students returned their support with our business. But beyond that, the restaurants and stores became a part of our everyday lives.

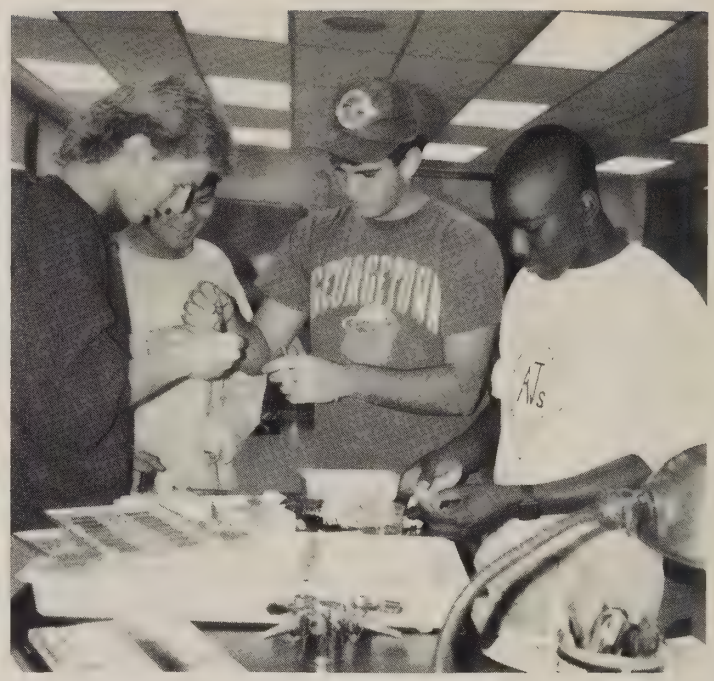
"Why did we all receive the same valentine?" ask freshmen Christine Valley, Jenna Larrabee, and Sarah Gaskin of an embarrassed Kelly Starrett.



In a co-operative effort, sophomores Kevin Besemer, Mike Choi, Aaron Parton, and Mike Carter work on a lab in Mrs. Jefferson's Biology I class.

The latest in prom fashions are modeled by senior Fashion Merchandising students Abe Logan, Stacey Gibb, Paul Padburg, and Dionne Fennell.

Patricia A. Duhart

Social Studies Teacher

Patricia A. Duhart was a person who touched the lives of everyone she met. By teaching, which is what she loved to do best, she taught her students to be whatever they wanted by using the power within themselves.

I feel very special because Patricia A. Duhart was not only a teacher, she was also my mother. She taught me to be what I want to be and not to worry about the negative. It's those words that I live by today.

When God took my mother away from me, I realized that she was sent here for a reason and her life was filled with accomplishment. When I see former students of my mother's and they tell me how she changed their lives, I smile, because this makes me realize her memory will never die.

Lisa R. Duhart
MV Class of 1990

[illegible] spirit [illegible] success [illegible] of the student body [illegible] to each other and united themselves into one mass of enthusiastic faces of all colors and creeds. With this unification of the school, spirit soared high and strengthened the backbone of the school, until it stood taller than the rest.

[illegible] the second half of the century. They looked to the past with sweet remembrance but still advance to the future with high hopes and great enthusiasm. The class of '90 will bring new traditions and memories as they lead the school into the grasp of a new decade.

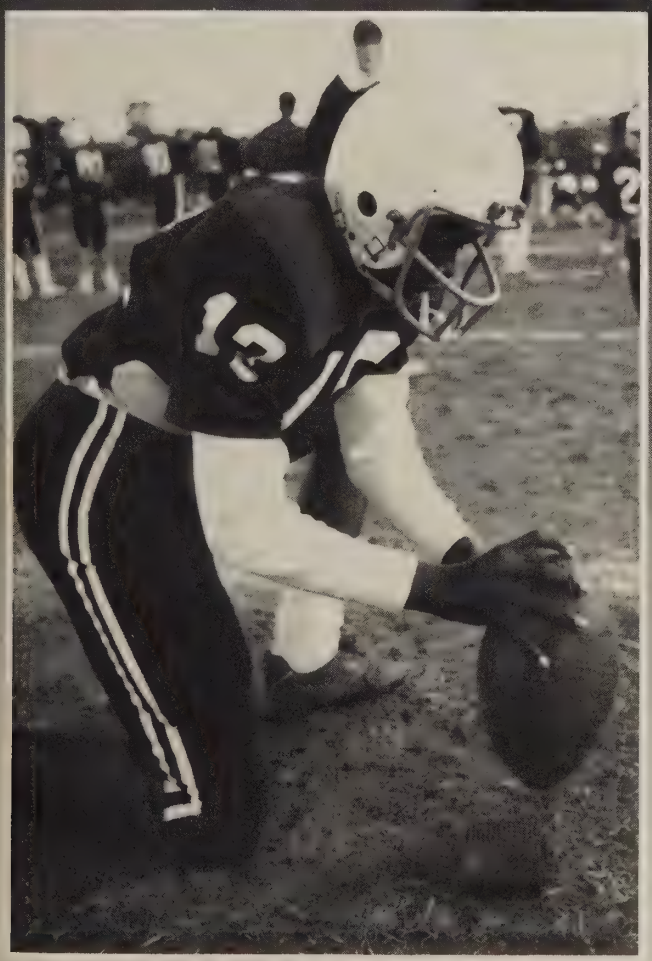
1989 was a year to say good-bye to the first fifty years and to look forward to the next fifty years to come. It was the year we struck gold.

Wandering aimlessly through the empty halls, is senior Andy Grassman.

Caught up in the hustle and bustle of the school bus, Tracey Morris and Angie Dorr search for an empty seat.

All smiles, seniors Steve Van Metre and Laura Sacco are relieved to escape school and greet the weekend that holds suprises and fun within its domain.

The all knowing junior Zak McNamara points the way to fun to those lesser knowing individuals.



Preparing the tee for a punt, freshman football player Sie Carter takes time to steady the ball.

Kicked back, principal Mr. Gordon Hill and former principal Mr. Michael Skinner enjoy a girls' varsity basketball game.

Engulfed in thought, senior Chris McCafferty takes a moment to ponder his years and accomplishments at Mount Vernon.

Eureka! It's Gold!

After a tough practice, swimmers Chris Cannavaro and Chris Kohl take a quick breather.

Excited over a basketball victory, Myrl Glenn and Mel Morgan show their enthusiasm.

Looking Back...

Every year we look back to the beginning and wonder where the time went. The weeks of study and work blurred into one as the days turned to weeks and the weeks turned to months. A long with the hours of homework, we remember the hours of laughter and fun that spent with friends. With sadness in our voice we bid a fond farewell to the old and greet the new with high hopes for the future.
